DEMONSTRATION OF FARM KITCHEN

A modern kitchen at moderate cost, designed to meet the needs of an Oregon farm family, will be exhibited in three sections of Umatilla county, on September 22nd in Milton during the morning, and in Freewater during the afternoon. On September 23rd it will be exhibited in Pendleton and on September 24th in Hermiston. The hours are from 10:00 to 5:00. Local arrangements are in charge of Miss Frances Clinton, Umatilla county home demonstration agent.

The needs of all members of the family are considered in the planning of the convenient kitchen; both time and foot-saving space for the mother; a drawer for the handy house tools for the father; a built-in desk for the business of the house and farm, and a play cupboard for the small children. Mrs. Virginia Schneider will have charge of the kitchen demonstration and will explain the various arrangements possible for different size kitchens.

The kitchen was planned and constructed through the cooperation of the Agricultural Extension Service, Home Economics Research, and Agricultural Engineering Department of Oregon State College. Miss Maud Wilson, in charge of Home Economic Research, is a nationally known authority on housing, and has planned the working units and the arrangement of the kitchen. Professor of Architecture in Agricultural Engineering, designed the built-ins and supervised the construction. Professor F. E. Price of the Agricultural Engineering Department supervised the lighting and the electric equipment. Miss Jean Peterson, Home Economics Specialist in the Extension Service, supervised the interior decoration.

According to Miss Clinton, the traveling kitchen is making a circuit of Oregon and will be on display in Umatilla county only at this time. The kitchen will be of great help to families who are planning to remodel or build. It will be also of great benefit to the homemaker who is planning either to remodel or build by giving her suggestions for time and step saving arrangement. Walter Holt, county agent, says the kitchen will be of special interest to men as well as women. During the summer of 1937 the traveling kitchen demonstration was exhibited in twelve counties with 19,244 men and women attending the demonstrations.

Benjamin, president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Cooperative Association; Clinton Golden, Director North Eastern Region Steel Workers Organizing Committee; Dorothy Kenyon, labor and cooperative attorney; Herbert Katt, manager of the Racine, Wis., Consumers Cooperative; Joseph Blaha, manager New Cooperative Company, Dillonvale; James Myers, chairman Committee on the Relations of Organized Labor and Consumers Cooperatives.

EARLY MATURITY OF TURKEYS NOW SOUGHT AS GOAL

Best opportunity for improving turkey profits from management practices lies in cutting down the time between hatching and marketing through better breeding and better feeding, specialists, growers and dealers agreed at the third annual turkey industries convention held at Oregon State college.

Most fundamental step in this direction lies in better breeding, F. L. Knowlton, poultry experiment station man explained. He described a breeding project started this past year at the branch at Hermiston where a systematic attempt is being made to develop an earlier maturing strain of turkeys.

Poultry breeding work has shown that early feathering is a characteristic easily transmitted by inheritance and as this is closely linked with early maturity and marketability it is believed that such desirable characteristics can be increased through selective breeding, Knowlton explained. Breeding work in turkeys has lagged far behind that with chickens.

Any feeding that is done with turkeys after about 5 1/2 or 6 months is highly inefficient in rate of gain. Noel L. Bennion, extension specialist, showed in citing results of research here and elsewhere. In one Nevada experiment it was shown that while the average rate of gain was 4.34 pounds of feed to one pound of gain throughout the growing period, it took 10.73 pounds of feed for each pound of gain during the seventh month of feeding.

Feed costs are reduced some 25 per cent where turkeys have free range on alfalfa or similar green feed, Bennion added. He also urged the separation of hens and toms before the finishing season and the marketing of the hens before the toms, as they mature earlier.

Broiler turkeys are strictly a specialty crop on which there is no established market, C. W. Norton, Portland dealer, reported. He also urged spreading the marketing period by means of earlier maturing birds or otherwise to eliminate storage turkeys as much as possible.

The Irrigon Grange will sponsor a pie social and card party at the school house Saturday, September 17, at 8:00 p. m. Each lady is asked to bring a pie and the grange will furnish coffee free. A charge of 25 cents per couple will be made.

NEW RECORDS MADE BY COOPRATIVES IN PETROLEUM DISTRIBUTION

(Co-op League News Service)
New York, N.Y.—Statistics reported to the Cooperative League indicate that the yearly volume of $110,000,000 of cooperative petroleum purchasing recently reported by the Farm Credit Administration may be exceeded in 1938 if present rates of increase continue.

The total gallonage of the Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, state wholesale of Ohio, increased to 2,149,079 for May 1938, an increase of 21 per cent. This was in the face of a decrease of three-quarters of 1 per cent in total gallonage of all companies for the entire state.

Sales of Consumers Cooperative Association of North Kansas City, Mo., reached $566,421.05 in July, an all-time high record for this 10 year old Cooperative Wholesale. Nine hundred and nine cars of refined products were shipped as compared with a previous high of a year previous of 761 carloads, a gain of 19 per cent.

The Kanabec County Coop. Oil of Mora, Minn., retail member of the Midland Cooperative Wholesale of Minneapolis, inn., reports sales of 1,031,427 gallons of gasoline in 1937, four times as large as the volume of 242,671 of its nearest competitor in the county.

POULTRY FEEDING TESTS REPORTED AT O.S.C. MEETING

Feeding and management fads and fancies sometimes work and sometimes are worthless when it comes to bringing poultrymen more profit, according to progress reports made by state college specialists to the fifteenth annual Oregon Poultrymen's convention held on the campus. Experimental results have in some instances gone exactly contrary to popular observation, they said.

One year's tests on comparative costs of raising sexed pullets and those purchased as straight run chicks ended slightly in favor of the pullets from the mixed group, despite the fact that the cockerel were fed and sold at a loss, W. T. Cooney, one staff member reported. Advantages from more room in the brooder during early weeks failed to show up in better gain, while at the end any difference in the two groups could not be distinguished.

Wet mash fed to old hens carried over into second year production proved highly profitable in another test reported on by Noel Bennion, extension specialist. With two pens of 125 hens each, fed the same except for the moist mash, the pen given the mash produced 3 per cent more eggs, mostly during the high priced season, so that the eggs were worth $33.38 more for that pen. Figuring all costs, the mash-fed hens made 78c per hen net profit, compared with 55c for the others. Bennion advocated having the laying flock made up of about 50 per cent old hens.

Feeding dry yeast to laying hens had no apparent beneficial effect, on the other hand, H. E. Cosby, head of the department and chairman of the convention, reported. Exact comparisons were made with no advantage noted for the yeast fed hens.

The Oregon Poultrymen's association in a business meeting near the close of the convention, elected P. A. Gent, Eugene, president. Elected vice-president last year, he served as president following the resignation of President Smith. Other officers chosen are L. E. Arnold, Albany, vice-president; F. L. Knowlton, secretary-treasurer; V. A. Parker, Blachley, and H. E. Peterson, Junction City, directors.

Resolutions asked for a state appropriation of $7000 to provide an adequate Oregon exhibit at the World Poultry Congress next year, and continuing appropriations for poultry research at OSC.
