MARKED GROWTH OF U. S. CO-OPS REVEALED AT OPENING SESSIONS OF CO-OP CONGRESS

(Co-op League News Service)

Kansas City, Missouri—While two million members of consumer cooperatives in 38 states went on quietly spending a million and a half dollars in their own cooperatives "buying their way toward prosperity," their representatives met here this week to discuss and decide by democratic vote the national policies which govern American cooperatives.

Opening the Eleventh Biennial Congress of the Cooperative League of the U.S.A., Dr. James P. Warbasse, president, declared that the League, which was organized 22 years ago to federate the genuine consumers societies in this country, is today a federation of 1770 local cooperatives which include 965,000 of the two million co-op members in the country. Membership of the League was reported to be 704,000 two years ago. With both farm and city consumers in its membership the Cooperative League is the educational spearhead of the organized consumer movement in this country.

Operating such varied businesses as the distribution of gas and oil, groceries, farm supplies, insurance, electricity and health service, the cooperatives are characterized by consumer ownership and democratic control of their businesses, and by the return of savings (profits) to their members. Total consumer co-op business was estimated by FORTUNE magazine in May 1937 at $500,000,000 per year.

Howard A. Cowden, president of the Consumers Cooperative Association, which is host to the Co-op Congress, shared with Dr. Warbasse a special Preview of the Congress broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting company network Tuesday evening. Cowden reported on the progress of the Kansas City co-op wholesale, which has 120,000 individual members and did a business of four and a quarter million dollars last year. He said that savings returned to members of co-ops in CCA territory totaled $850,000 in 1937, and announced that CCA has completed plans for the erection of a $600,000 oil refinery which will serve part of the 400 co-ops affiliated with CCA.

Murray D. Lincoln, secretary of the Ohio Farm Bureau Cooperatives, told the Co-op Congress that cooperative auto insurance is saving the farmers of Ohio millions of dollars in a single year. The Farm Bureau Mutual Auto Insurance Co-op, Lincoln reported, began in 1926 with an investment of $10,000. Today it has assets of 5 1/2 million dollars and is the fifth largest of its kind in America. This growth took place, Lincoln pointed out, in the face of the keenest competition and during a decade of which five years were years of business depression.

Lincoln pointed to cooperative insurance as one way to cut the power of concentrated wealth and to help restore individual security. Cooperative financial and insurance institutions, he declared, are coming to be the main foundation of the whole cooperative system.

E. R. Bowen, general secretary of the Cooperative League of the USA outlined for the consideration of the cooperative leaders assembled here a "program of action for the consumers cooperative movement", including publicity, education, and cultural programs as well as the educational aspects of commodity, service, insurance and finance.

Pointing to the broader aspects of the movement, Mr. Bowen declared, "The consumers cooperative movement cannot isolate itself from other democratic organizations. The history of Europe shows that we will fall together if dictatorships develop. If we read history aright, the attack of dictatorship is first on democratic political organization, then economic, then educational and finally ethical. All these four great democratic organizations which society has formed over the course of the centuries must all stand together or else they fall together."

The success of the cooperatives in breaking the fertilizer trust and acting as a yardstick for monopolies and near monopolies was pointedly driven home when the co-op general secretary declared, "An Associated Press story truly says that 'representatives of a million trust-busters are mobilizing here for a new attack on monopoly in the United States'. Another world war has been postponed, but there is no assurance that it has been prevented. There will be no enduring peace or plenty in the world until the people take their own economic destinies out of the hands of a few and direct them democratically in the interests of all."

STUDENTS THROG TO CO-OP TRAINING SCHOOL AS FALL TERM OPENS

(Co-op League News Service)

New York—Twenty-four students from ten states from Massachusetts to Colorado were accepted for an intensive training course in consumers' cooperation when the fall term of Rochdale Institute opened here September 26. A five months' course consisting of three months of academic work in New York under the supervision of Dr. J. P. Warbasse, president of the Cooperative League of the U.S.A., and a faculty made up of cooperative leaders, professors and experts in business methods, will be followed by two months of field work in cooperatives in various sections of the country.

Rochdale Institute, which was set up by the Cooperative League to give students training which will equip them for work in the fields of education and management in the rapidly growing consumers cooperative movement, was recently chartered by the University of the State of New York.

As classes began at the co-op college in New York, the directors of the Cooperative Managers Training School, sponsored by Central Cooperative Wholesale, Superior, Wis., faced the difficult task of eliminating two-thirds of the applicants for their 14th annual training school. Ninety-one prospective students from six states applied for admission. Because of limited facilities, that number must be cut to 35 so preliminary examinations are being held in six cities to select the most capable students. Classes are scheduled to begin October 10.

KANSAS CITY TO BE MECCA FOR COOPERATIVES

(Co-op League News Service)

Kansas City—This "convention city" will see something new in the way of conventions when the entire second week of October will be turned over to consumer cooperatives. Monday and Tuesday, October 10 and 11, delegates from 400 retail co-op associations in 10 mid-western states affiliated with Consumers Cooperative Association will meet here for their 10th annual convention.

Immediately following the CCA convention, delegates from co-ops in every section of the U.S. will meet here in the municipal auditorium, October 12, 13 and 14, for the three-day convention of the Cooperative League of the U.S.A. Consumers Cooperative Association will be host to the national co-op congress.

COOPERATIVES MAKE ALL BUSINESS MORE RESPONSIVE TO CONSUMERS' INTERESTS

(Co-op League News Service)

Boston, Mass.—Consumer cooperatives in Europe play as important a role as the chain stores do in America and their future growth depends, as with other business, upon their efficiency and their ability to give service to the public. Anders Hedberg, president of the "trust busting" Scandinavian electric lamp cooperative, told leaders of American retail business gathered here for the Boston Conference on Distribution, September 27.

Speaking on the "Effects of European Cooperatives on Retail Trade", Mr. Hedberg, who is also secretary for international questions of Kooperativa Forbundet, the cooperative wholesale and union of Sweden, described the British cooperatives which "with a record of ninety years of business experience now have 8,000,000 members and do an annual retail business of one and a half billion dollars". He then told of the accomplishments of the Swedish co-ops which have some 4,600 co-op stores and more than one family in every three as members.

The European cooperatives parallel the American chains in relative volume and business efficiency and have forced other business to adopt more efficient methods, Mr. Hedberg pointed out.

Unlike the chains, he said, the cooperatives tend to preserve local ownership of distributive machinery; they oppose and in many cases regulate monopolies; "In Sweden the co-ops have built anti-monopoly fortresses in the shape of flour mills and factories for the manufacture of rubber goods and electric bulbs"; they are independent of the financial barons; they do not ask for government subsidy or protection; and they give the people practical business experience which is beginning to dispel economic ignorance. "The consumers cooperative movement in Europe," Mr. Hedberg declared, "helps to make all business constantly more efficient and more responsive to the consumers' interests."

CO-OP FOOD TESTING KITCHEN BEING ESTABLISHED BY EASTERN CO-OP WHOLESALE

(Co-op League News Service)

New York—Following closely the announcement that co-op stores affiliated with the five cooperative grocery wholesales in the U.S. will begin to handle Uniform CO-OP Label and Government Graded groceries, Eastern Cooperative Wholesale announced this week that it is establishing a food testing kitchen for cooperatives in the East.

Mrs. Vienna Bramblett, well known food expert, has been employed to initiate this experiment, made possible by the new warehouse and office of ECW at 135 Kent Avenue, Brooklyn. Mrs. Bramblett has had wide experience as a home economics teacher, including positions at Purdue University and Pratt Institute, according to L. E. Woodcock, manager of the co-op wholesale. She has conducted canning schools in conjunction with the Extension Service in New England and the midwest. She has written for various farm and women's magazines and is the editor of a currently popular cook book.

Mr. Woodcock insists that the step while significant is modest. "We feel that we can greatly increase the value of our service to consumers in establishing these facilities," he said, "but we are start-
