WISE MAXIM

A short time ago an agricultural expert told a group of formers that the use of government help in solving farm problems should not handicap marketing cooperation. Those farmers never heard wiser words.

The government can help, at times—but it can't do the whole job. Government farm-relief plans are necessarily of political origin, and are thus assured of only a short life. Real and permanent farm betterment must come largely from the efforts of the farmers themselves, through such a movement as production and marketing cooperation to dispose of production at fair prices.

"Self help is best help" is still a wise maxim.

For an entire week the capital of the 4H Boys and Girls Clubs and Future Farmers of America will be at the Golden Gate International Exposition, when the Twelfth Annual Interstate Junior Livestock Show is held on Treasure Island April 2nd to 8th. Mary Futini, pretty 4H Club member of Salinas, Calif., will be a strong contender in the baby beef division.

Liechtenstein a Small Stamp Issuing Country

Liechtenstein is a small agricultural principality lying south of Lake Constance between Switzerland and the Austrian province of Germany. The original tongue of the region was Romansch, used by the Grisons of Switzerland, and perpetuated in many of the place names of Liechtenstein, notably the capital, Vaduz, and Samina, Gavadura, etc., observes a stamp authority in the Chicago Tribune.

This is one of the smallest independent stamp issuing countries in the world, being underrated only by San Marino and Monaco. In area it embraces somewhat less than 70 square miles and is about 12 miles in its greatest dimension. The state is composed of the county of Vaduz and the lordship of Schellenburg, both of which were in many hands before being purchased by the count of Hohenems in 1613.

The Liechtenstein family purchased Schellenburg in 1699 and Vaduz in 1713. In 1719 the two states were raised to the status of a principality in the Holy Roman empire. This ended in 1806 and Liechtenstein was independent until 1815, when it became a part of the German confederation. In 1866 it again regained its independent status.

From 1852 until the close of the World war, it was joined with Austria in customs, coinage, and postal matters and appeals from its highest court at Vaduz were taken to the prince's court in Vienna.

Sunken Treasures Along The Shores of Trinidad

At the bottom of the Gulf of Pearls, now called the Gulf of Paria, lie the fortunes in gold and silver lost when Admiral Apocada set fire to his ships in 1797 so that they could not be captured by the British, with whom Spain was at war at the time.

Blackbeard the pirate burned many a ship in this gulf—all of them taking gold and silver to the bottom of the bay. These fortunes lie beneath the waves somewhere between Port of Spain and San Fernando, according to a writer in the Boston Herald.

It is believed by many that Admiral Apocada carried the treasure with him when he and his men escaped to the shore, and that it was buried there in the soft sand banks between Port of Spain and San Fernando.

The superstitious Trinidadians are afraid to seek this buried riches. They believe that the souls of the men who dug the holes still guard the spots. These men, as was the rule of the day, were killed as soon as the treasure was placed in the holes and were thrown in after it by the men who bade them dig it.

Bad luck, it is believed, will follow any one who seeks this buried gold and silver, thus disturbing the souls supposed to be guarding it. Fearing misfortune, Trinidadians hesitate before pushing a spade into the sand.

Naming Pere Marquette Railroad

Just how the Pere Marquette railroad got its name is a story known to few outside Ludington, Michigan. Ludington was originally named Pere Marquette after the explorer and missionary who died on the shore of the Pere Marquette river here, says a Ludington correspondent in the Detroit Free Press. When a railroad was projected across the state from Flint it was naturally called the Flint and Pere Marquette railroad. But before the road was completed here, James Ludington had acquired most of this town and the name was changed to Ludington. Then the eastern terminus of the road was extended to Detroit rather than Flint, which left the name meaningless. However, as the name had been widely advertised, its owners didn't want to change it entirely, so they just shortened it to Pere Marquette railroad.

PRODUCTION CREDIT ASSN. REDUCES INTEREST RATE

Farmers and stockmen of the Umatilla County district had one-tenth of their annual interest bill for short term credit cut off this week as the Pendleton Production Credit association announced a reduction of interest rates from 5 to 4½ per cent.

The new rate is the result of a like reduction in the discount rate of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank, W. E. Moore, secretary-treasurer, of the Pendleton association, explained. Loans by Production Credit association are discounted through the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank. Both are units of the Farm Credit Administration.

Reduction followed the sale of debentures of the nation's 12 Credit Banks at one of the lowest rates ever obtained by a private securities sale. The debentures are not guaranteed by the government either as to principal or interest.

This low rate, said Mr. Moore, reflects the soundness of short term farm paper marketed wholesale through the Credit Banks. The changed rate effects all business written on or after February 24.

"This is the lowest rate at which Production credit has been available since the system was created in 1933," Mr. Moore said. "Based upon the present volume of business, this interest reduction will result in annual savings of approximately $800,000 to the 243,000 members of the 535 Production Credit associations in the United States."

SAFETY SONNETS

Not unlike an ostrich is the man who stops his car on the highway, gets out, raises the hood and pokes his head down into the region of cylinders and spark plugs while other automobiles swish past behind him with only inches to spare.

Automobiles standing in the roadway were involved in 692 accidents in this state last year, two of their drivers were killed and 96 persons injured, according to Secretary of State Earl Snell.

Aside from the fact that the driver exposes himself to unnecessary risk by working on the car while it is still in the roadway, he also creates a definite hazard for other drivers who are forced to pass him, especially on narrow roads when two cars approach from opposite directions at the same time.

While nearly all drivers recognize the need for pulling off the road when they have engine or tire trouble, there are other circumstances in which they are not so well trained. Drivers frequently stop suddenly on the highway to read direction signs, to retrieve articles which have blown from the car, or to wipe off mist or frost which has collected on the windchield.

Whatever the cause for stopping, every driver should make it an infallible rule never to bring his car to a prolonged halt in the main-traveled portion of the roadway, except in the most unusual circumstances when it cannot be driven or moved onto the shoulder or convenient turn-out.
