CANADIAN COLLEGES TEACHING SPECIAL COURSES ON CO-OPERATIVE MOVEMENT.

OTTAWA, CANADA—With five short courses on the cooperative movement just completed by colleges in Quebec, special educational projects undertaken by colleges in the Maritime Provinces, the establishment of a Chair of Cooperation at Laval University, Quebec, and with national and regional student conferences urging the organization of campus co-ops and the addition of courses on cooperation in the curricula, Canadian education circles began to feel the impact of a growing cooperative movement.

The Second National Conference of Canadian University students, meeting in Winnipeg a year ago endorsed the organization of cooperatives on Canadian university campuses and appointed a special student committee on campus co-ops. At regional conferences for the Maritime Provinces and Ontario and Quebec last month the students again urged the organization of cooperatives asking that the Canadian Student assembly adopt, as its next immediate objective, the promotion of campus cooperatives throughout Canada. (There are already cooperatives on 160 campuses in the United States.) The students also asked that the study of the cooperative movement be added to college curricula.

Laval University, Quebec, has established a Chair of Cooperation in order to keep abreast of the rapid growth of interest in cooperatives.

St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, Nova Scotia, which pioneered in a program of adult education and cooperative organization which has led to the economic reconstruction of eastern Nova Scotia has been followed in its work by St. Dunstons college, Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, and other colleges in the Maritimes.

Five short courses on the cooperative movement have just been completed by colleges in Quebec which were financed entirely by the government through a youth training program to alleviate unemployment. The program is jointly financed by the province and Dominion governments. Three hundred students attended these courses with board, tuition and transportation paid by this fund. Four of the courses were for French Canadian students. The other, held at MacDonald college, an agricultural division of McGill was for English speaking students between the ages of 16 and 30.

DUTCH CO-OP BUYS FOURTH SHIPMENT OF OIL FROM U. S. COOPERATIVES.

NORTH KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI—The Consumers Cooperative association has just shipped an order of 65 barrels of Co-op lubricating oil to the central cooperative wholesale of The Netherlands, located at Rotterdam. This was the fourth order from the Dutch co-op within one year. The oil was blended at the compounding plant in North Kansas City owned by the 120,000 patron-members of the Consumers Cooperative association.

The Dutch cooperatives are earning a membership in CCA through the savings they make by purchasing through the U. S. co-op. They will share with the 425 cooperatives which make up the Consumers Cooperative association in the control and distribution of savings.

CCA has shipped Co-op oil to cooperative associations in Scotland, France, Belgium, Bulgaria, Estonia and Canada during the last few years in addition to the shipments to The Netherlands.

FERTILIZER NEEDS ARE DISCUSSED

In conjunction with the use of stable manures and cover crops commercial fertilizers are often applied to advantage to supply readily available plant food in the home garden, according to M. E. Knickerbocker, assistant county agent. In growing vegetables unusually good soil conditions are necessary not only for commercial crop production, but also in the garden for home use. Nitrogen is more likely to be a determining factor in crop growth than phosphorus or potash. However, the efficiency of nitrogen in general seems to be increased when materials supplying phosphorus and potash are used with it. Of the elements commonly supplied by commercial fertilizers nitrogen has the most pronounced effect in encouraging the development of leafy growth in the above-ground portion of the plant, and imparting a dark green color to the leaves. It tends to produce succulence, a quality of considerable importance in most vegetables.

Phosphorus stimulates the root growth, induced blossom formation, and hastens maturity. It is particularly helpful in stimulating early maturity in head lettuce, cabbage, sweet corn and tomatoes. It also strengthens the stems of plants and increases resistance to freezing. Potash is especially useful in the growing of root and fruit crops, and is found abundantly in leafy vegetables. When present in plentiful amounts in the soil, it seems to influence peas to be more tender and decreases various physiological disturbances such as leaf scale, tip burning and spotting. It is also considered useful in improving the keeping qualities of cabbage and other vegetables.

These facts and many other facts having to do with successful vegetable production are brought out in a bulletin recently written and issued by A. G. B. Bouquet, Horticulturist of Oregon State college. Copies of this bulletin can be obtained at any extension service office.

COLUMBIA GRANGE NOTES

Very favorable reports were heard Tuesday evening concerning the "Sock Social" held March 31. The famous Irish pig netted the Grange nearly $20.00, although Mrs. Emery Cox won it for 13c. Door receipts brought nearly $10.00.

We are sorry so many Grangers had to be listed as absentees, for we enjoyed a fine business meeting with a social hour following. Mr. and Mrs. Knickerbocker were with us. He gave an interesting talk on crop rotation planned on a six-year cycle. Grange members entered freely into the discussion of crop rotation offering suggestions from farm experiences.

For the ladies' part, several fine "short-cuts" and helps were given for spring housecleaning.

As suggested from the National Grange headquarters, Columbia decided to devote its first meeting in May to an open meeting, commemorating the oath of office taken by that great statesman, George Washington in 1789.

There will be a patriotic program and a social hour following. Fellow Grangers and friends are welcomed to share in this commemoration. There will be no charge and refreshments will be served free of charge by the Grange ladies.

SET UP COOPERATIVE HOSPITAL SERVICE PLAN IN MINNESOTA AND WISCONSIN.

ST. PAUL—Medical consumers in the states of Minnesota and Wisconsin will get hospital care for two cents-a-day and will join together to provide medical care on a cooperative basis in community groups, according to announcements released this week by the Group Health Mutual and the Group Health association.

The unique state-wide plan for group hospital care differs from usual hospital service plans in that the members of the plan, launched early this year, will own and control the organizations insuring the hospital and medical service rather than merely being subscribers to a service. Group Health Mutual, Inc., a mutual insurance company incorporated under the insurance laws of Minnesota, will provide hospital care insurance for its members at a basic rate of 60 cents a month. This insurance will be available only to members of local health units which are being organized throughout the state and chartered by the Group Health association, a parallel but separately incorporated organization set up under the non-profit law of the state. These health units will be made up of employees of a business concern, members of credit unions or cooperatives or of some other group with a common bond of occupation or association. The local groups, in addition to securing hospital service, will act as the basic organization to provide broader local medical service. The hospital insurance service is available to groups not now covered and is good in any hospital in the United States and Canada.

The Group Health plan has aroused great interest and many local units are being chartered in Minnesota and Wisconsin. Most of the groups chartered to date are in the Twin Cities, but units have also been organized in Austin, Albert Lea and Eau Claire and preliminary steps have been taken in several other communities.

The boards of directors of the two cooperative organizations are made up of people active in credit union, cooperative, trade union and other movements in the North Central States. The office of the associations is located at 2195 University Avenue, St. Paul.
