A MESSAGE TO EVERY MEMBER.

WESTLAND GRANGE ENJOYS PICNIC

Members of the Westland Grange, with their families, and several visitors, enjoyed a wiener roast on the H. R. Hartley farm last Thursday, in spite of the record-breaking heat. Iced lemonade furnished by the Grange provided welcome relief from the heat of the evening.

During and after the wiener roasting period, the group was entertained by music furnished by Harold Laird, who sang to his own accompaniment on the guitar. Other entertainment features of the evening consisted of a riddle guessing contest, and a general round of story telling in which nearly all members participated. The program was arranged by Mrs. J. D. Corliss, grange lecturer.

The next Grange meeting, August 10, will be a regular business session.

USDA OFFICIALS SEE OREGON PROGRESS

Better understanding of regional problems serves as a cement to bind together the work of the United States department of agriculture at Washington and the land grant colleges, M. L. Wilson, under-secretary of agriculture, told officials of both branches at a gathering in Corvallis last week in July.

Wilson and a score of other program-making and policy-forming men in the federal department of agriculture had stopped at Oregon State college in the course of a motor tour which started at Spokane and continued through Idaho, Washington, Oregon and into California.

While in this state the visitors inspected work of the Soil Conservation service, Farm Security administration, bureau of agricultural economics, Agricultural Adjustment administration, and the O.S.C. extension service. Concerned primarily with the agencies assisting in land planning, the visitors were particularly interested in the progress which has been made in this state in adapting the type of agriculture to the needs of the region. William A. Schoenfeld, dean of agriculture, and F. L. Ballard, vice-director of extension, explained the cooperative relationships in this state.

BOARDMAN NEWS

By Ruth Fisher

A case of sleeping sickness among the horses on the Paul Smith farm has been reported. A veterinary was called and steps are being taken to vaccinate the horses on the property. Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McCutchen of Walla Walla and son Bob and nephew Robert McCutchen of Pendleton, were here over the week end attending to business and visiting among friends.

Bobby McDermott who has been visiting at the Glen Hadley home returned to his home at Stevenson, Wn., Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner Bond of Oregon City stopped at the John Fisher home Monday, en route home from the agriculture instructors' convention at Halfway. Elaine Fisher accompanied them from here. She will be gone for the remainder of the vacation.

Gilbert and Mabel Walker and Mae Tomkins arrived at the Frank Walker home from Estacada this week.

LaVerne Baker, who is attending the E. O. C. E. at La Grande, came home Friday to spend the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Baker.

The good news was received that Mrs. Jack Gorham, who has been so seriously ill in the hospital at Hermiston, is beginning to improve.

A miscellaneous shower was given in honor of Mrs. Rollo Moor at the home of Mrs. Albert Baker, Friday. It was well attended and a pleasant time was had by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Earwood and family were dinner guests at the Oliver Forbes home Sunday.

Harry Ford took out a load of watermelons in his new pickup Monday. Many melons are being shipped out now. Since there has been some depredation in the patches by marauders, a close guard is being kept on most patches.

Elmer Sullivan returned from the agriculture instructors' convention at Halfway and reports a pleasant and profitable time.

The silver tea of the Ladies Aid of the Community church meets Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Macomber.

FRESHMEN-TO-BE GIVEN HINTS ON CHOOSING COURSE

By E. B. Lemon, Registrar at O. S. C.

Within a few weeks more than 300,000 recent high school graduates will be college freshmen throughout the United States. What to choose as training for later life work is a serious matter for nearly all of these. Many have definite ideas as to the field of work they desire to pursue, others are not so certain, while large numbers have no definite decision. "What course shall I take," is, consequently, the most common question asked college advisers.

First of all it can be said that the final selection of any particular professional field is not too important at the start. The essential thing is that college training be undertaken with enthusiasm, with a determination to make the most of opportunities, and with the realization that adequate training in certain basic fields is necessary for success in any profession or vocation. Fortunately the Oregon state institutions of higher learning are so organized that such basic training is available to any student during the first two years.

This does not mean that the selection should necessarily be deferred until the end of the second year. On the contrary, if a student is reasonably sure he wants to take engineering, for example, there may be real advantage in enrolling in a professional school where the curriculum is somewhat modified in that direction.

On the other hand, the young man who has not reached such a conclusion is by no means unfortunate. He will find much good company among his college associates who, too, are trying to solve the same question. They will be helpful to each other.

It has been my experience that many students find themselves, so to speak, through acquaintance and exchange of ideas with fellow classmates. Information obtained in this way, when checked and expanded by helpful faculty advisers, frequently leads to sound conclusions.

Many students would like to be told exactly what they should take by submitting to a vocational or aptitude test. These tests have their place, but are not the final answer. They do help to reveal what a student is not fitted for and thus aid in reaching a decision by a process of elimination.

A freshman's first objective may well be to find a field in which he is interested and in which he will be happy. Having discovered such a field, he should not be side-tracked by temporary unemployment or economic conditions. In the first place, unsatisfactory conditions may change. If they do not, there will at least be a constant turnover of employees, and in due time this will make room for the ambitious, well-trained graduate.

Operators of motor vehicles in Oregon are now required by state law to dim their lights when meeting an approaching vehicle at night.

Earl Snell, secretary of state, reminded motorists in explaining changes in the law regulating auto lights which were adopted by the 1939 state legislature.

Under the old act, motorists were required to dim their headlights only when meeting another car on a wet, hard-surfaced highway. The law as amended requires dimming at all times when within 500 feet of the oncoming vehicle.

"This law is based on courtesy and safe driving practice and whole-hearted compliance with the act unquestionably will cut down the number of traffic accidents reported in Oregon," Snell declared. "Every month statistics on traffic accidents in this state show a number of mishaps in which glaring headlights were a contributing factor. Any driver, however expert and cautious he may be, is in danger of having an accident if the lights of an incoming vehicle so impair his vision that he cannot see his side of the road as he passes the car."

During the year 1938 three persons were killed and 36 were injured in auto accidents in which glaring headlights were factors. Snell's figures show. One death and nine injuries were reported during the first five months of 1939 as a result of drivers being temporarily blinded by bright headlights.

The law was amended to provide that headlights should be of such intensity as to reveal persons and vehicles at a distance of at least 350 feet ahead instead of 200 feet as under the old law. The new law stipulates that the beam of the headlight when dimmed shall not project higher than 42 inches above the ground at a distance of 75 feet in front of the car.

After January 1, 1940, cars equipped with multiple-beam road lighting lamps must be equipped with a beam indicator which will illuminate when the uppermost beam is used. This indicator must be conveniently located so that the operator can tell at a glance whether his lights are dimmed or on full strength.

ICE CREAM AN ALL TIME FAVORITE

To many a child and grownup there's no more beautiful music these torrid days than the whir of the family ice cream freezer or the crackle of a cone as the soda boy pushes into it a generous dipperful of frozen dessert. For in a dish or cone, on a stick or in other novel form, this food that literally melts in the mouth has come to be a national favorite.

According to one version, ice cream made its debut socially in the United States when First Lady of the Land, Dolly Madison, served it at a White House reception shortly before the War of 1812. In those days, of course, this new food delicacy was definitely in the luxury class. Wholesale production of ice cream which began in Baltimore less than a century ago is now a $22 million dollar a year industry. Demand for this factory-made ice cream has grown tremendously in the past two decades. Twenty years ago Americans bought about a quart and a third of ice cream per person a year—last year they bought nearly eight and one half quarts per person. The many different varieties and qualities for sale today would astound pioneer Dolly Madison.

As any hostess knows, ice cream is always a winning dessert. In combination with fruit it becomes just that much more popular. Ice cream flavored with the real fruit not only has a good natural fruit flavor, but it also has the added food value of the fruit. Highly flavored fruits such as strawberries and peaches, apricots and nectarines, pears and boysenberries, make suitable flavoring for ice creams and sherbets.

Have you ever tried the "make your own sundae" way of serving? Arrange on a tray several different sauces, chopped nuts and marshmallows, cherries, and then pass dishes of plain ice cream to the guests and let them concoct their own dessert. It's fun!

Another ice cream variation that challenges the experimental streak of every homemaker is the ice cream pie. It sounds impossible, but really easy to do, and its unflinching results will please you.

Ice Cream Pie.

- 1 quart ice cream
 - 1 1/2 cups strawberry preserves
 - 2 egg whites
 - 4 tablespoons sugar
 - 1 baked pie shell of butter pastry
- Spread layer of strawberry preserves in the pie shell. Cover with ice cream. Have ready stiffly beaten egg whites into which has been mixed the sugar. Spread meringue over ice cream. Place in a 400 deg. oven and brown quickly. Serve immediately.

HERMISTON UNION CHURCH

GARDEN CLUB CHATS

Mrs. Daniel Heffner of Portland will be in town Tuesday, August 15, to talk to members of the Garden club. She will be here both afternoon and evening to talk on flower arrangement and horticultural judging. Mrs. Heffner is a member of the lecture board of the state federation of garden clubs, and well known throughout the state. Hermiston is one of the cities in Eastern Oregon in which she is giving talks, and surrounding garden clubs are Read up on the new daffodils. There are some that have very little resemblance to the daffodils we have always known. "Cheerfulness" and "Mary Copeland," as well as "Twink" are names of three varieties shown in the garden handbook of House and Garden that are outstanding in beauty.

The Roving Reporter of the Walla Walla Union tells us of a trip he has taken to Victoria lately. He says it is one huge garden in the city proper, as well as in the outlying residential districts. Places of business are bright with window boxes, all light standards in the shopping district have huge baskets of growing plants hanging from them, and the whole effect is one of extreme beauty that calls the visitor back to this lovely, conservative city to the north again and again.
