

COOPERATE

The average working man in America could be getting a hundred dollars a week and it still wouldn't do him any good if he didn't own his own stores and operate other cooperative enterprises to keep prices down, quality high, and give him a stake in the ownership of the means of distribution and production." Neal S. Beaton, president of the Scottish Cooperative Wholesale Society.

GARDEN CLUB CHATS

The Garden club float, arranged by a committee under Mrs. T. A. O'Grady, won well-deserved applause in the parade Wednesday. It represented a garden scene, an enclosure bounded by a low white picket fence, with gay flowers peeping through, and a background of shrubbery and golden glow. Sitting in the garden were two young girls, Loree Gimble and Myrna Gayley, the idea of the float being the depiction of beauty. Donations of the beautiful flowers for the float from all over the project were gratefully received by the committee, who wish to express their thanks to all who helped.

The groups about the flower section at the local fair showed the influence of garden club meetings throughout the past season. Everywhere one saw wild and incomprehensible gestures, which translated into club language, ran something like this: light and airy flowers at the top, heavy or darker flowers near the container, and it must be a suitable container for the kind of flowers displayed. The Hogarth "line of beauty" was drawn through the air by many a club member, and all agreed that talks and demonstrations had made a change in the character of the exhibits shown. It was a fine display and a credit to the committee, headed by Mrs. F. C. McKenzie and Mrs. F. B. Belt.

Gardeners should make a resolution, and keep it, to clean all weeds out of every bit of space, and burn them while the weather is nice to work out of doors. This is the last chance for transplanting, and all the work that can be done now in preparation for next year's early activities will be a blessing later. As one cleans, burns, transplants and discards, new vacancies appear that may influence orders from the attractive catalogues and winter reading in new and old garden magazines.

The flower show on the 8th of September—don't forget it and don't let anyone else forget it, either. Send schedules, obtainable at the Hermiston Drug store, to anyone you think will be interested, and study it in relation to what you may have yourself. Don't forget that the Japanese, who are supposed to be the experts in this line, say "plant your garden so that you may have three blooms of the same kind in it at one time." That narrows your needs, and broadens your show possibilities.
