STOP - CONSIDER INVESTIGATE

There are several things you should give some heavy thought, AFTER you have driven a new tractor on demonstration. They all run perfect, when new, handle easily and perhaps thrill you to have something new in your hands. But STOP, and think clearly for just one instant about these few, but very important items:

First—Has this machine been proven in the field, with its various integral equipment? Has it proven satisfactory in your locality?

Second—Does the dealer selling this machine guarantee satisfaction, and is he able and willing to help you take care of your machine during its life? What kind of service can he give you?

Third—Will this machine operate economically on just a few cents a day? Remember the first cost is only a start, and a nickle is worth just as much to you as it is to some company.

Fourth—Is it a 100% tractor, built for heavy, long continuous loads in its lower gears? Is it a tractor motor, clutch and transmission? Remember a tractor operates almost continuously in its gears. (John Deere Transmissions are all Timken bearing mounted.)

Fifth—Does the dealer know implements so that he understands your implement problems? If he does not, he is just groping about in the dark so far as helping you is concerned.

Sixth—Can you get the equipment you want for this machine, and how expensive will it be?

In regard to the first question—The purchase of a tractor and integral equipment is a very large investment, so you must buy something that has been proven, something backed by years of experience both by dealer and manufacturer, because this machine MUST give years of satisfactory service on your own operation to pay dividends on your investment.

When you buy John Deere from Braden-Bell, you get the correct answer to all of the items in the above mentioned paragraphs.

Yes—there are new models and important improvements in insurance policies as well as in motor cars.

For example, automobile liability insurance recently has been liberalized to cover—at no extra charge—husband and wife while driving another person's car.

Notable new plans in insurance are available in other lines also—greater protection at less cost in many instances and written with strong capital stock companies—your guarantee of security.
