

ECONOMIC JUSTICE

Liberty and equality applied to economic organizations, the elimination of poverty, unemployment and tenancy, and the supplying of equitable incomes, employment and ownership for everyone in the nation, is the solid condition of contentment and peace.

The cooperative movement is committed to the effort to achieve economic justice as the foundation for peace. The degree to which these conditions are realized in our American life constitutes one of our strongest defenses against the totalitarian aggressors from whom we are preparing to defend our country.

New Brain Operations May Aid Mental Cases

New brain operations, made possible by patient, difficult research in the "geography" of the brain, may offer hope of sanity to certain types of hitherto hopeless mental cases, according to Dr. J. F. Fulton, professor in the Yale university school of medicine.

Studies of the localization of bodily functions in the brain tissue must take into account, Dr. Fulton points out, not only the human brain, but the brains of various animals at different levels of evolution. This work has established the principle, he said, that the higher the evolutionary progress the more control the frontal lobes have over all the lower levels of nervous function.

Cats, for example, may have the area that controls leg movements removed and suffer only a short period of paralysis and weakness. Marmosets, a bit higher in the scale, behave like the cat, but the paralysis is more enduring. In Pithecooid monkeys, such as the macaque, removal of the "leg" areas produces profound paralysis from which it takes months to recover. In chimpanzees and in man it produces a permanent paralysis.

These studies of the "geography" of the brain have opened the way to surgical procedures never dared before, Dr. Fulton points out, because it was not known what paralysis, for instance, might follow excision of part of the frontal lobes. Now, without danger of such disaster, it is possible to remove parts of the frontal lobes and restore to certain types of mental patient a cheerful attitude and ability to cope with their problems.

The results of such operations are being compared with the results obtained from the various "shock" treatments for insanity, such as those using insulin and metrazol.

Minor Improvements Add to Home's Charm

Often it is the extremely modest home, trim, well kept, and radiating warmth and hospitality, that arouses the interrogation, "Isn't that a lovely home?" It does not take a pretentious mansion to call forth such admiration, for more often than not it is neatness and maintenance, that gives the dwelling its appeal.

Frequently a new coat of paint or a new roof will transform a rather drab home into one with a pleasant, inviting atmosphere. Sometimes more is needed—a new porch, a new entrance, dormer windows, a bit of landscaping. If it is a frame house, a brick of stucco veneer or stained shingles may be a better investment.

A check list of things which the home owner could do to modernize the exterior should include: Repair masonry and brickwork, point up masonry, sandblast brickwork, apply transparent waterproofing, make cornices and water tables weather-tight, waterproof basement walls, stucco side walls, brick veneer the exterior, paint weathering surfaces, replace defective flashing, pressure-gun caulking, install outside drain tile to conduct water away from foundation, install new areaways.

Treatment of Ear Diseases

The most effective way to reduce the incidence of acquired deafness and impaired hearing is early diagnosis and immediate treatment of all diseases of the ears, since infections are often the forerunners of these conditions, according to Horace James Williams, M. D., Philadelphia, writing in the American Medical Journal. Catarrhal and pus-discharging infections of the middle ear generally occur in children before the age of five; therefore the child must be carefully watched during this period for any signs of inflammation or infection of the ears. Sinusitis also plays a part in impaired hearing and deafness, in that when a child cries or vomits, the nasal secretions are forced into the ear tube. These secretions should be removed mechanically.

Gritty Paint as Camouflage

Camouflage experts in England are employing various paints for use on structures where light reflection should be diminished. Gritty oil paint—usually applied to horizontal surfaces and roofs—assists materially in disguising the contours of a building. There is also a gritty oil-bound water paint for use on asbestos and asphalt where permanence is desirable, and also a non-gritty flat paint for application to walls and other vertical surfaces. These paints are important where artificial and conspicuous figures are to be painted on a horizontal surface, as for example, when a large factory is camouflaged to look like a row of cottages or even a private dwelling. Sometimes the illusion of a road passing over the roofs of buildings is created, and roads are even painted across a landscape for the purpose of making them cut through these roofs.

Enemy of Varnishing

Dust is an enemy to good results in varnishing, so when a job of this kind is undertaken it is well to remember that all materials and tools used should be kept as free from dust as possible. Paint authorities advise that the rooms be kept dust free and that the brushes be kept clean and varnish cans closed except when in use.

Poultry Meets September 12 - 13

The fourth annual Oregon Turkey Industry convention and the 16th annual Oregon Poultrymen's convention will be held this fall on successive days, September 12 and September 13, is announced by H. E. Cosby, head of the poultry department at Oregon State college. Both meetings will be held on the campus. It was decided to have the events on successive days again so that it would be more convenient for growers who are interested in both chicken and turkey production to attend.
