ELK SEASON OPENS
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1

The last of the 1940 big game seasons opens on November 1 with the bull and cow elk seasons in north-eastern Oregon and continues through November 16. Cow elk may be shot only if the hunter possesses one of the special cow elk tags, 2,000 of which were sold by the Oregon State Game commission.

Elk territory embraces all of Union, Umatilla, Grant, Morrow and Baker counties and a portion of Walla-walla county. The cow elk territory does not embrace the entire bull area.

All hunters planning to indulge in elk hunting are warned that tags are necessary for both cow and bull elk. All hunters are required to check in and also out of the elk territory. Checking out is a requisite even though the hunter has not bagged an elk.

Sixteen regular and eight special checking stations will open at noon on October 30. Hours for the regular stations will be from 7 a. m. until 9 p. m. Special stations will be operated at the convenience of the occupant, although in most cases the same hours will be observed in the special stations as are announced for the regular ones.

Regular stations will be located at LaGrande, Enterprise, Pendleton, Pilot Rock, Ukiah, Heppner, Milton, Long Creek, Dale, North Powder, Seneca, Sumpter, John Day, Baker, Troy and Blue Mountain Ranger station. Special stations will be found at Starkey, Union, Unity, Prairie City, Junura, Drewsey, Burns and Halfway.

Before being allowed to enter any hunting area, each hunter will be checked to determine if he has sufficient ropes to hang up a carcass after it has been quartered, adequate skinning knives, hatchet or ax and shovel, together with a vehicle of sufficient carrying capacity to transport any elk killed.

The official hunting synopsis issued by the commission contains a map of the bull and cow elk territory, together with all regulations concerning elk season. Sanitary regulations will be enforced throughout the elk area and sportsmen are warned that it is necessary to clean camp and leave it in good condition.

Dr. Eric Englund, assistant chief of the bureau of agricultural economics and a graduate of Oregon State college, is in charge of this year's conference program. It has been arranged to emphasize consideration of imports and probable effects of the war upon the farming industry. Problems of agricultural adjustment to meet the domestic and world conditions indicated by the outlook will be considered.

Major attention this year will be directed toward the situation for the principal farm products such as cotton, wheat, tobacco, fruit, meat animals, and dairy products. Responsibility for developing outlook information on specialty farm products will fall largely upon state agricultural college outlook specialists. This is particularly the case in Oregon where the production of specialty crops and animal products is an important fac-
