

IN EVERY COMMUNITY

where cooperative enterprise exists, it operates as an effective control of monopoly and as a safeguard against exploitation. The whole community benefits because a group of its citizens has the courage and the initiative to strive to better their condition collectively by cooperative enterprise.

Cooperation is democracy applied to business. It is a number of people working together owning and controlling the policies of the business that furnishes them with goods and service. Every citizen should support and take an active part in the affairs of their co-ops, because in so doing they are helping themselves. Their co-op's success is their success. Their co-op's gain is their gain.

METHODIST CHURCH
Stearns Cushing, Pastor
"The Church of the Living God", what is it? Is there only One Church? The only Christian church in the gospels is the apostolic band, and upon this little company of twelve men Jesus lavishes a large part of the wealth of his time and thought and love. The New Testament knows nothing of any unity except that which is purely spiritual. Christ in the upper chamber prays that his disciples may be one, but he does not ask that they be one in ritual or in government. Church school at the usual hour with just the class you need. The Epworth League meets at 6 for the fellowship hour, followed by the devotional hour at 7.

INFANT DAUGHTER DIES AT BOARDMAN

Little Betty Jane Earwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Earwood of near Boardman, passed away November 24. The little miss was born September 10, 1940, reaching the age of two months and 15 days. She Betty Jane was a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Steinke of Arlington and Mrs. Mollie Earwood of Caldwell, Idaho. Funeral services were held at the Community church in Boardman Tuesday, November 26, with Rev. J. K. Walpole in charge.

CARD OF THANKS
We wish to take this opportunity to thank our friends and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy shown during the illness and death of our daughter and sister, Betty Jane Earwood. We especially wish to thank those who presented floral offerings. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Earwood and family.

Grandfather's Farm Calls Woman Teacher

After a teaching career which progressed from the little red schoolhouse to the school of speech, Syracuse university, Mrs. Grace S. Bull of Syracuse has virtually returned to her birthplace on prolific and historic acres among the Madison county hills. She owns the farm her grandfather operated almost a century ago, she did nearly all the mowing on the farm during the 1939 season and she saw her herd of Holsteins develop in two years to the highest rating in the county's history.

But beyond that, she finds that in spite of a long period of urban existence, the call of the soil is still strong and clear, the same call her grandfather answered back in 1852, writes Joseph H. Adams in the Syracuse Post-Standard. At every opportunity she rides eastward from Syracuse through Fayetteville, through Chittenango, past the old stone cheese factory and then deeper and deeper down a rustic winding road to a spot she has always loved through the years.

Over the gravel road which enters the farm on the fringe of sturdy trees she passes, to stop finally near one of a group of red barns. And there she is met by a flurry of joy and animation as her collie, Trixie, leaps forward to greet her with such eagerness that the animal comes incredibly close to human speech. And Mrs. Bull, who was born in the grand old homestead, is just as eager to be back where she spent a happy childhood and where she intends one day to take up her residence again.

Claim Palace in Haiti Air-Cooled 130 Years Ago

To those who imagine that the idea of air conditioning is new it comes as a surprise to learn that an effective system was put in effect over 130 years ago by the black Emperor Henri Christophe in his palace at Sans Souci, in Haiti.

Christophe, the most despotic king of his day, employed air conditioning to cool his regal palace rooms as long ago as 1808. Built over a rushing mountain stream in order to permit the cool waters to refresh the rooms, this palace contained a sumptuous banquet hall and chamber of gilt mirrors that held a richly carved mahogany throne. Other rooms contained Gobelin tapestries and paintings of old masters, a great library brought from Europe, but never touched, as Christophe could neither read nor write.

Even in its present state of ruin and decay, Sans Souci is splendid. In its heyday it was approached through a huge gateway guarded by gold-colored sentry boxes, which are still standing, guarding this spectre of a glamorous past. From this palace tourists proceed by mule or horseback through Haitian jungle, coffee, banana and orange groves to the Citadelle of La Ferriere, also built by the black king, on the crest of a jungle-clad mountain.

War Makes Birth Decline
Deaths on the battlefield are not alone responsible for the decrease in population reported at the end of every war. In fact, the Journal of the American Medical association states in a recent issue: "Actual battle losses are matched by losses in future population due to reductions in the birth rate."

The depletion of young men and the resulting disturbance of the ratio of marriageable men and women constitute one of the most serious effects of war, the magazine says in quoting statistics showing that 72 per cent of German military deaths and 55 per cent of French military deaths during the World war were men under 30.

In 1910, both Germany and France reported they had about as many men as women. After the World war, however, Germany reported an excess of 150 women per 1,000 men between 25 and 29 years, 259 per 1,000 from 30 to 34, and 181 per 1,000 from 35 to 39.

For the same age groups, France reported an excess of women, respectively, of 261, 206 and 176. The Journal says: "Some of the results, such as the great increase in the proportion of marriages in the postwar period in which the groom was much older than the bride, were quite obvious. Another effect was the continued fall of the birth rate after the war. Clearly the actual battle losses are matched by losses in future population due to reduction of the birth rate."

Every Bedroom an Island
Every bedroom in Ashford castle, Connemara, Ireland, which has just been opened as a hotel, is named after one of the islands in Lough Corrib. One bedroom is called Dringean, another Tober, another Cleenilaun and another Illanree. The islands themselves took their names from old legends or from events of long ago.

Pictorial Menus
Pictorial menus may be the next refinement in the restaurant business. One New York chain has begun experimenting along this line with a color photo "glorifying" Yankee pot roast taking up more than half an inside page of its menu.

NATURALLY, Happy That Jersey Farm Milk Is Better!

It's the milk from pure bred Jerseys which have been bred for centuries to insure a better product. Not only is our milk richer in butterfat but we believe that it has the lowest bacteria count in town.

We are quite proud to announce that our latest count from the State Department of Agriculture shows the following Standard Plate count of 200 bacteria per c.c. for our raw milk.

With a tolerance of 10,000 bacteria per c.c. for Grade A milk, we feel that with a count of only 200 that we really have something. Call us and order a trial quart today.

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world" (1 John 4:1).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Christian Science goes to the bottom of mental action, and reveals the thadecy which indicates the rightness of all divine action as the emanation of divine Mind, and the consequent wrongness of the opposite so-called action,—evil, occultism, necromancy, mesmerism, animal magnetism, hypnotism" (p. 104).
