To Tent and Trailer

Beneath the shade of a spreading Locust tree is a much sought spot these days in Hermiston and roundabout. Little did we think when we planted these hardy desert trees that we were giving hostages to fortune in a great defense program.

Their trunks grew and branches spread against the assaults of wind and storm, and they provided shade and comfort for men and animals that found habitation here. Highways and avenues and fields were cooled from scorching heat, and the ravages of the southwester. It is fair to say that the thousands of trees for miles around transformed the early desert atmosphere from early harshness to a softer and more livable mildness.

Too little appreciation has been given for the presence of these groves, and lawn covered, lane lined and field edged shelters. A million trees have grown up and upwards since we began planting, and we have almost forgotten the lack of them.

Now come our new neighbors by orders from our government, and give a new meaning to the acts of former days. And you, the owners of trees, should have a new appreciation of what has been done for you, and help spread the benefits to the camping strangers within our gates. It is just one way, of the many, we can help defend our nation.

TRAILER SCALES FOR 4-H CLUB WORK PROVE VALUE

A new trailer scale unit for use with 4-H clubs in the central Willamette valley is now under construction in the agricultural engineering department at Oregon State college, and will be ready for use in the early summer. This unit, expected to cost about $200, is being financed by the Willamette Valley Production Credit association.

The idea of building a set of livestock scales into a trailer to be taken from farm to farm to weigh 4-H club livestock was originated here in Oregon about seven years ago. The first such trailer was financed by the Congress hotel at Portland and is still in use after covering some 50,000 miles of roads in Malheur, Baker, Union and Wallowa counties.

Since that time units have been built in Harney, Klamath, Jackson, Lane and Sherman counties, and one unit which serves both Gilliam and Wheeler counties. Trailer scales are also under construction at present in Wasco and Umatilla counties.

These portable scales provide frequent opportunity for livestock club members to weigh their animals and keep records of gains and compare them with the others, says L. J. Allen, assistant state club leader. This in turn has greatly improved the quality of the club work in livestock production. The idea has been adopted in other states and frequent requests for plans are received at the college.
