NUTRITION GROUP ARRANGES PLANS FOR COUNTY SETUP

Though Oregon is unusually favored in the matter of quality and variety of food products produced within its own borders, investigations have shown that the health and stamina of Oregon citizens can be materially improved by greater use of findings of modern science in the selection and use of food in the home.

Such is the conclusion of the state nutrition committee for defense which at its latest meeting at Oregon state college arranged for a comprehensive program of activity for county nutrition councils for defense which will be organized soon.

State and county defense nutrition committees have been charged with the duty of contributing to what is now known as total defense in this country. While at first defense was considered to be concerned largely with military man power and war equipment, the present total defense plan includes industrial defense and food defense, the committee points out.

Each county council will include such officials as the FSA home supervisor, the county nurse, if any; the home demonstration agent, representatives of the Smith-Hughes work in high schools, the county school superintendent or rural supervisor, and representatives of the Red Cross, PTA and leading farm organizations. Following are the objectives agreed upon toward which the county councils will work.

1. To coordinate the efforts of all organizations within a county on nutritional problems.
2. Through a united effort in education to reach all people in the county to the end that their health and welfare will be improved through better nutritional practices.
3. To encourage food habits which will improve diets at all income levels.
4. To promote wider distribution and utilization of inexpensive foods of high nutritional value, and use of larger amounts of protective foods, and to encourage home production of foods.
5. To cooperate with other programs for national defense.
6. To insure the use of authentic information by utilization of sources of material from Oregon state college, the bureau of home economics;

U. S. D. A. DEFENSE BOARDS CREATED IN STATE, COUNTY

With national defense as the first order of business in the U. S. at present, Oregon has just set up a U. S. D. A. defense board designed to marshal all of the resources of the various agricultural agencies under a unified effort to contribute most in the national emergency. Each state has a similar board.

The Oregon board is headed by Robert Taylor of Adams in Umatilla county, who is chairman of the state AAA committee. On the state committee will also be the director of the O.S.C. extension service, Dean William A. Schoenfeld, and designated representatives of the various agencies of the department of agriculture functioning in the state. These agencies include the AAA, the bureau of agricultural economics, farm security administration, soil conservation service, forest service and the rural electrical administration. Similar defense boards have also been created in each county to be headed by the county AAA chairman.

Dean Schoenfeld has asked the county agent in each county to serve as extension representative and the federal agencies will designate representatives to serve on each county board. Specific functions will be assigned to the boards from time to time by the secretary.

The order specifically stated that nothing in the new arrangement alters the cooperative relations of the department of agriculture with the state extension services, or the responsibilities of the state extension services in education and land use

NAVAL ACADEMY HAS VACANCY

The second district of Oregon will have two vacancies for Annapolis appointment for entrance in June, 1942. Representative Walter M. Pierce announces that designation examinations will be given prospective candidates by the U. S. Civil Service Commission on October fourth, at the first and second class post offices in Oregon cities having applicants.

Any high school graduate who has maintained a high scholastic record and is physically fit, especially as to eyes, may enter this examination.

The Annapolis training offers a very fine opportunity for an education without financial outlay. Students interested in making application should immediately write the Congressman, at Washington, asking for full information and filing high school and college credentials.
