For Southern Products

Southern farmers, who have been growing more and more fruits and vegetables since 1931, also have a growing problem of getting the produce to market. On a tonnage basis, production in six southeastern states increased more than 30 per cent in the seven years up to 1938, according to the bureau of agricultural economics, U. S. department of agriculture. More and more of this increase is going into the eastern markets. New York city and Philadelphia in 1938 received nearly one-third of their supplies from six southeastern states, in comparison with about one-fourth in 1931.

There has been a marked shift in the way these fruits and vegetables move to market. While tonnage was increasing more than 30 per cent, rail and boat shipments went down 17 per cent. Motor-truck receipts of fruits and vegetables in New York and Philadelphia from those six southern states were equal to more than 17,000 carloads in 1938—about seven times the figure for 1931.

The South needs an adequate market system, says the bureau, to provide for its expanding fruit and vegetable production and for the shifting methods of transportation. The bureau of agricultural economics, co-operating with the various states, has been studying ways to improve the handling of these perishable commodities, and to develop a marketing channel where no adequate channel exists.

New Flour for National Diet Developed by U. S.

Nowadays everyone talks of business, home, recreation in terms of the national defense program. And the program has speeded up production in many fields. Besides guns, munitions and war equipment, for instance, there's a noticeable speed-up in nutrition experiments.

The latest development along these lines is a new flour for the national diet. And government experts say it will restore vitamin B to "the staff of life." This vitamin flour is in the last stages of perfection in the offices of the department of agriculture. But it still is unnamed.

Authorities say that the new flour will not be a compulsory diet item. Millers and bakers and grocers will still be permitted to mill, bake and sell the old white flour, and housewives will use it. But any flour sold under the name to be picked must meet the standards that are being written into the definition.

The public will be urged to eat this flour, at least as the main part of the breadstuffs that go with the daily three meals. And that brings a short discussion of the need of vitamins. Doctors and research workers have spent years delving into every possible angle of the subject. And their findings are conclusive enough to prove that vitamins are not a fad.

Meat on Daily Menu

Through ages long past, meat has been an important part of man's diet. Centuries before man knew that meat was a rich source of protein, vitamins, phosphorus and iron, he ate meat to satisfy his natural craving for it.

Now, nutrition has become a science which shows us what we should eat and why. Recent advances in this science make it clear that from a nutritional point of view, even though a charge account at a grocery store has replaced a bow and arrow, the important place meat has always held in the diet of man is both desirable and justified.

And why should meat be a part of the daily diet? First of all, it is an unexcelled source of protein. Protein is one of the essential elements we need in our body for growth and to build or repair body tissues. The protein of meat is unequalled not only because it is present in large quantities but because the protein of meat contains so many of the amino acids necessary for health.

Grand Coulee Dam

Motorists visiting the Northwest during the coming season should visit Grand Coulee dam, 94 miles west of Spokane, Wash.

Grand Coulee dam is 98 per cent completed and it now towers far above the construction trestle from which visitors view the dam. About 10,500,000 cubic yards of concrete are already in the barrier and only about 35,000 yards remain to be placed.

The dam is 4,200 feet across the crest, 550 feet wide at the base and 32 feet wide at the top. It contains 25,000,000 tons of concrete and steel. A highway will run across the crest over a series of bridges spanning the drum gates.

Electric Toothbrush

With the invention of a mechanical toothbrush human beings are going to be relieved even of the slight effort now required to scrub their molars. The electric toothbrush cleans the teeth with rapid "up and down" motions in the manner prescribed by dentists as the bristles are vibrated. The apparatus resembles an electric razor in appearance with the exception that either a short-handled brush or a rubber gum massager is inserted in the handle. And one electric toothbrush safely can be used by all members of the family by obtaining individual brushes and massagers.

Photography Without Camera
An interesting phase of photography is the making of pictures without the use of films or camera, a process simple for anyone who prints his own pictures. In making prints of leaves and insect wings, for example, results are in some respects superior to ordinary camera shots, bringing out detail. Wings or leaves must be perfect specimens, and pressed and dried, otherwise the ribs and veins will prevent perfect contact in printing and pictures will be "fuzzy," and therefore undesirable. When the specimen is placed right side up in the printing frame and a print is made in the usual way, the result will be a negative, or white-on-black print, writes John Willard Baechle in Nature Magazine.

HOW CAN HOGS MAKE MORE GAIN ON LESS FEED?
• Our test hogs always make more gain on less feed when DR. HESS HOG SPECIAL is added to the ration. They gain as much as 4 lbs. more per hog per month on 1/2 less supplement and 1/10 less grain!
Hog Special is a two-job product. First it supplies tonics which help stimulate body functions. And the hog is usually able to make better use of feed.
Hog Special also supplies essential minerals. These Hog Special minerals are iron, iodine, copper, calcium and phosphorus. These minerals are needed for good health and good gains.
Tonics and minerals—a two-job product. Don't let anybody try to convince you a product containing only minerals is as good as Hog Special.
