OREGON UPS FOOD PRODUCTION WHILE CROP PRICES RISE

Tangible evidence of adjustments in Oregon's agriculture toward national food-for-defense and nutritional program goals is contained in a review of the current farm situation just issued by the extension service at O.S.C. The report also shows that the farms over the nation as a whole are expected to produce abundantly with increases being registered in many of the defense and nutrition commodities such as meat, milk, eggs, and certain truck crops and fruits.

Outstanding among Oregon's contributions toward the national food program are the expanded output of canned products, particularly green beans and peas. Oregon's production of green beans for processing is expected to reach 20,500 tons this year, as compared with 15,000 in 1940. Green pea production is estimated at 35,170 tons of shelled peas.

The official figures of the United States department of agriculture place Oregon as the first state in the nation in volume of green beans for processing in 1941 and third in green peas. Both of these industries have grown rapidly during a period of years, but the increase this year is particularly noteworthy. The green bean industry is centered on irrigated lands in the Willamette valley, while green pea production has attained prominence on good non-irrigated lands largely in Umatilla county.

Further gains in the general farm price level have been made during the past month, bringing the Oregon index somewhat above 85 per cent of the 1926-1930 average level. Farm prices are now more than 20 per cent higher than the general average a year ago. Among the important factors which have helped to boost farm price levels are the current high rate of industrial employment and income of consumers, higher government loan rates on basic farm commodities, and the food-for-defense buying operations of the government.

The sharp advance in farm prices has occurred despite large stocks on hand of many items and the prospect for increased production this year. Farm costs are advancing also, although not as rapidly thus far as the prices for many kinds of farm products. The index of prices paid by farmers, interest, and taxes at mid-June stood at 130 per cent of the 1910-1914 level, only two points higher than a year before. Farm wage rates have advanced more rapidly and there are indications that other farm costs may be affected by the current trend toward general price inflation.

Relative farm price levels at mid-June in the United States, in percentage of the 1910-1914 levels were: Meat animals 144 up 42 points from a year ago, dairy products 126 up 22 points, chickens and eggs 118 up 37 points, truck crops 146 up 34 points, fruit 97 down 7 points, grains 96 up 13 points, and cotton and cottonseed 107 up 13 points.

COUNTIES TO HAVE IRRIGATION TOURS

A series of six county irrigation tours throughout the Willamette valley will replace the annual western Oregon irrigation tour this year, announces Art King, extension specialist in soil and irrigation. The western Oregon irrigation tours held annually since 1930 are credited with having played an important part in expanding the irrigated acreage west of the Cascade to its present high figure of around 40,000 acres.

The individual county tours have become more important each year, however, as it has been possible to arrange a rather complete program in each county. The county tours this year will be held the week of August 4 to 9 starting with Lane

YOUTH GROUPS TO FEATURE NUTRITION

Leaders of youth groups throughout the state are to be asked by the Oregon committee on nutrition for defense to emphasize nutrition in some part of their regular program, it was decided at the recent state meeting of the committee.

A subcommittee on boys' and girls' health, headed by Miss Bertha Kolhagen, in charge of home economics education in the state department, proposed a plan to prepare information on nutrition in the form of charts, films, plays and exhibits suitable for use in youth organizations.

In addition, it is hoped to be able to furnish leaders of youth groups with lists of bulletins, plays, and illustrative materials which they can obtain from other sources.
