WHEAT INSURANCE FOR 1942 EQUALS LAST YEAR TOTAL

As the sign-up for 1942 winter wheat crop insurance closed in Oregon last Saturday, August 30, preliminary reports showed that the number of farms covered by insurance and the total insured production will equal or exceed the 1941 figures in the state, according to Clyde Kiddle, crop insurance assistant at the state AAA office.

First reports from county offices indicated that winter wheat production will be insured against all risks in 1942 on about 5000 Oregon farms, covered in an estimated 3259 applications. The 1941 total total for both winter and spring wheat was 5839 applications covering the same number of farms, of which about 85 per cent developed into policies. The 1941 applications covered production of 3,910,000 bushels on 244,000 acres.

Provisions in the 1942 program whereby the grower may insure his interest in the wheat crop on all the farms in the county with one application will reduce the number of applications, but not the number of farms covered.

Favorable growing conditions this year resulted in unusually few loss payments. To date, the state office has approved payment of 401 loss applications, for a total amount of indemnities of 36,646 bushels. More loss applications are being received every day however, and payment for losses will continue until November 15.

Most of the losses are being paid in western Oregon; where foot rot, Hessian fly, rust and excessive moisture took a heavy toll in some counties. Fire and hail were the principal causes of losses paid in the eastern Oregon wheat area.
