UMATILLA RAPIDS LOOMS AGAIN!

Sidney Hillman, one of the heads of the OPM, stated in an interview last Sunday that the Umatilla Rapids should be next. This makes a cordial agreement from us about the dam site, through Dr. Paul J. Raver, administrator of Bonneville and Grand Coulee, through the army engineers, all members of Congress from the Northwest, the National house committee on rivers and harbors, to and including the heads of National Defense. We have always been assured that the President was in like accord, and now, with the Pacific growing in importance in commercial and naval defense, and the Pacific Northwest likewise increasing its facilities to aid that defense, there seems but little else to do but for someone in high authority to press the button.

DEPOT WORKERS GOOD CITIZENS

We have grown accustomed to the many workers on the Umatilla Ordnance Depot, and somewhat acquainted with many of them. Now that they are going, score by score, we are beginning to miss familiar faces. We can say, without contradiction, that the community has gotten on well with them, and we hope that they feel that way about our months of association. In daily parlance, they have all behaved extremely well, so well that we must say that they are a fine bunch, and we therefore extend them a warm welcome when they return to other works here. From our experience we can do better also, and hope to have better provisions for their welfare.

NAVY OFFERS OPPORTUNITY

A two ocean navy and almost 1000 battleships, cruisers, and other war craft for permanent defense, as well as the present national emergency is calling for young men. Unusual offers with opportunities for the future are offered. Men who face the call of the draft, or seeking training in the various courses offered will do well to consider this phase of service to their country. Articles descriptive of opportunities appear in this issue of the Herald and in many other newspapers and we recommend consideration of this important subject.
