

STATE CORN SHOW CONTESTS TO TEST PRESENT CHAMPS

Will anyone be able to dethrone C. A. Marsh of Albany as the Oregon corn-shucking champion? This question is being asked in connection with the forthcoming fifth annual Oregon State corn show at Corvallis December 12 and 13, when the annual corn-shucking contest will be a usual feature.

For the past two years Marsh, an ex-Iowa corn grower, has led the field and has "two legs" on the championship cup, which becomes a permanent possession if won three years. Runners-up last year were J. G. Morgan, Brownsville, and Walter Woods, Corvallis.

The shucking contest will be held at 9:30 o'clock Friday, the first day of the show. It is open to all Oregon corn growers, with winners receiving five merchandise prizes in addition to the championship cup.

Marsh was also winner of the corn growers' judging contest last year, the runners-up being Otto Lucht of Molalla, and Elvin Asher of Dayton. This contest will be held Friday forenoon too.

The sweepstakes trophy in the corn show itself was won last year by Clayton Nyberg, Tualatin, who was also champion in the hybrid corn class. E. C. Wiesner, Brooks, sweepstakes winner for two years, won the championship in the open pollinated class last year, and is expected to be a strong contender again this year.

Hybrid corn growers will again compete for yield honors, with the state divided into two districts. Requirements in this class are that at least three acres must have been grown with the yield checked and the samples submitted by the county agent. Last year F. S. Green of Stanfield was champion with a yield of 125.69 bushels per acre, while L. O. Gorman of Grabtree won in western Oregon with a yield of 67.16 bushels.
