OSC COMMITTEE TO ORGANIZE HELP IN FARM REPAIR PLAN

A committee to mobilize the efforts of the Oregon State college agricultural staff behind the current national campaign to insure adequate machinery for producing and harvesting next year's crops has been appointed by William A. Schoenfeld, dean and director of agriculture. The committee will help carry on the program inaugurated in this state by the United States agricultural defense board aimed at bringing about early repair of all present machinery on farms, and immediate ordering of essential new equipment.

Named on the special committee are F. E. Price, agricultural engineer in the experiment station, chairman; W. L. Teutsch, assistant director of extension, and E. R. Jackman, extension farm crops specialist. All county agents will be enlisted in the state-wide program.

The most acute farm machinery problem in Oregon is to obtain adequate equipment to handle the 50 per cent expansion in acreage of winter legume seed, according to Dean Schoenfeld. Tentative plans have been made for a series of county-wide educational meetings at which seed harvesting methods will be discussed and the machinery situation in the various localities will be surveyed. Oregon farm machinery dealers and distributors will be invited to cooperate in these meetings, which will deal with the most efficient operation of seed-harvesting machinery, as well as how to obtain the necessary equipment.

Early repair of all machinery now on farms will be urged throughout the state to make sure that necessary parts can be ordered in plenty of time. Extension men believe that Oregon farmers generally have had such long experience with handling and repairing machinery that they are more skilled than the average throughout the country, hence will not need actual training schools on this work. The principal task, it is believed, will be to bring about an immediate inventory of repair needs, with orders placed at once.

Closely allied to this is the current drive to have farmers gather and sell all scrap iron available. Usable parts and iron suitable for future repair work are to be held on farms, however.
