UMATILLA ISSUES NEW ORDINANCE BOOK FOR CITY

A brand new volume with all material carefully indexed and classified, now awaits the citizens of Umatilla who wish to check upon city ordinances or look up any matters relating to the administration of the municipality, it is announced by J. A. Stephens, mayor.

Classification of ordinances has been completed by the Bureau of Municipal Research of the University of Oregon and the League of Oregon Cities as part of a state-wide WPA project under which a number of Oregon cities are receiving similar service.

Copies of the active ordinances needed to carry on the day to day work of the city, an index to those termed inactive, a complete index of the active ordinances, a general index to the charter, and a copy of the charter annotated with all amendments, are all included in the volume.

Of the 147 ordinances found during the codification project, 11 had been specifically repealed and 13 were obsolete. Fifty-six other ordinances have been repealed for various reasons.

The new book now contains 29 (including one repealing ordinance) active ordinances grouped as follows: Legislative 3, General administration 5, Elections, Financial, Courts, Police, Traffic regulations, Disorderly conduct, Fire protection 2, Public nuisances 4, Health protection 2, Weights and measures, Business and trades 2, Building codes, City planning, Franchises 4, Municipally owned utilities 3.

Forty-nine inactive ordinances cover special elections, bond issues, tax levies, street improvements, and others which will be of value for reference.

Umatilla is the 45th city in Oregon to have its ordinances codified. To date 52 cities have requested this service.

HOME CANNING TO BE STRESSED HERE

Save your fruit jars, lids, and rubbers with more than usual care this winter, is the new word in war-time frugality that comes from the Farm Security office here in Umatilla county. "You'll want to fill all the jars you have on hand, and maybe more, to insure good nutrition here at home and to release commercial canned goods for our navy and army," states Mrs. Genevieve Nettleton, county home management supervisor, who advocates at all times a self-sufficiency program for farm folk on family size farms. Mrs. Nettleton believes that every homemaker is eager to do her part in the present crisis and she points out the need of saving carefully the glass jars and rubbers as an aid to the year-round canning program in the event of limited production of these essential articles of equipment.

Members of the Farm Security program are being assisted by both RR and HM supervisors, in planning bigger and better gardens, in securing pressure cookers and in proper use of home grown foods throughout the year.

ROCKETS COMING FRIDAY NIGHT

The strong Pilot Rock basketball quint will come to Hermiston Friday night. The visitors are reported to have a pretty fair ball club and will make the evening decidedly interesting for the Hermiston Bulldogs.

Two games are scheduled for the evening, the first to get underway at 7:30.

FIRE DEPARTMENT ANSWERS CALLS

The fire siren blew twice during the past week. Sunday the call was to a Portland-Pendleton truck parked near the Lindsay building across the railroad tracks. In some manner the motor had caught on fire but was extinguished before much damage was done.

Monday a call came from the Seventh Day Adventist church where an overheated stove became dangerous. This was also taken care of before serious damage resulted. Citizens are urged to take extra precaution these days because there is more danger when stoves are worked to the limit.

POST OFFICE HAS RECORD BUSINESS

A total of $695,248.12 was handled at the Hermiston post office during the past year, according to Postmaster W. E. Logan. This figure set an all-time high for the office here. This sum was divided into the following departments: Money orders, $572,924.48; stamps, $24,568.39; bonds, $21,128.25; postal savings, $76,627.00. OPENINGS LISTED TRAINING CLASSES

War and the necessity for huge increases in the production of airplanes has caused the national defense pre-employment training classes in Oregon to be double, creating openings for residents of the Hermiston area, James Clinton, manager of the Hermiston office of the United States Employment service, said today.

"At the present time", Clinton said, "there is a shortage of applicants for the aviation sheet metal classes."

"All men within the ages of 18 and 19 1/2, 35 to 40 years, and those in the selective service classification groups 2, 3 and 4, who are interested in the west coast aircraft factories, should apply immediately to the United States employment service here or in Pendleton."
