VOTE FOR WATER AND SEWERAGE

In this issue of the Herald appears notice of election on an improved water system and a sewer system for Hermiston. In the meantime it will be well for every voter to read the public notice and give consideration to the proposals and the great benefits that will accrue from such needed improvements.

Hermiston has permanently passed the population of 800, which was served by the old water system, and the inconveniences for sanitation under the former regime. We must figure on at least 1500 people, and perhaps 2000 or more in the near future. This will require not only a larger water supply, but a duplicate pumping system in case of emergency for domestic use and fire protection, and proper sanitary conditions under state law, will require sewerage as soon as possible. We escaped epidemics last summer but the effects of an enlarged population and poor sanitary arrangements may be felt next summer.

We have now, because we are within a defense area and in a war zone, an opportunity to secure funds on a 50-50 or more basis and low rate of interest on service bonds, the like of which may not come our way again.

The city authorities and federal officials have given the subject much consideration for months, and are presenting the most feasible program that can be worked out cooperatively for the municipality and government.

Not only will the new improvements be of special advantage to all citizens and property owners now here, but such progressive additions to the city will add to its general growth and increase in wealth, population and desirability of Hermiston as a home and business center. We believe that the citizens of Hermiston will again prove their progressive spirit and approach all the phases of the question involved with an open mind. We are sure that if there are any dissenters now they can be convinced of the benefits to each and every person, and that there should not be a vote cast in opposition to either the water or sewerage improvement on election day.

BENNION REPORTS BIG INCREASE IN POULTRY INDUSTRY

Noel Bennion of Oregon State college releases the following reports on the poultry industry of Oregon:

Last spring the Federal Government asked for a 10 per cent increase in egg production by January 1 in 1942. The December estimate of the government indicates that this goal was nearly reached in December and probably would be attained by January. At the present time there is a 10 per cent increase in the number of laying hens in the United States and all hens are laying approximately 10 per cent more eggs, which seems to indicate there will be from 15 to 20 per cent more eggs in 1942 than in 1941. The year 1941 was a record production year from present indications. It looks as though Oregon will more than meet its goals of poultry production, which includes an increase in hens of 12 per cent, poultry meat, 9.8 per cent, as well as an estimated increase of 10 per cent in turkey production. The federal government is supporting prices on eggs and poultry meat at 85 per cent of parity through 1942. Turkeys, as yet, are not included as a commodity to receive price support.

The poultry industry is now waiting for the report of the Annual Outlook Conference which is held in Washington, D. C., in January. At this conference goals will be established for 1943, based on the amount of increase indicated for 1942.

Regardless of the poultry outlook, farmers and commercial egg producers who have laying flocks should be primarily interested in getting increased production of eggs in the fall and winter months. The price of eggs is nearly always best from August to January. Quite often the production obtained during these months will determine whether or not a flock will operate at a profit. Some of the factors bearing on fall and winter egg production are:

1. Percentage of pullets to old hens.
2. Time of year the chicks were hatched.
3. The brooding and handling during the growing period.
4. The type of housing used and other available equipment.
5. The use of artificial lights.
6. The quality of ration fed.
7. The use of supplemental feeds.

At least 50 to 75 per cent of the flock should be replaced with pullets each year. Early hatched chicks in February, March and early April have a lower mortality, make faster growth and development and ordinarily produce more eggs when eggs are the highest price.

When brooding and rearing the chick it is very important that the brooding operation be kept divorced from the older or laying flock. When young chicks are in contact with older birds they often contract diseases which tend to increase chick mortality and cut down the rate of growth and development and as a result these birds do not develop into profitable layers.

September 'til March or February is a valuable aid in getting increased production during this period of high prices. In using lights, approximately a 13 hour day should be provided. The laying hens should be fed a well-balanced ration consisting of mash and scratch grain. Mash should be kept before the birds at all times with scratch grain fed night and morning. The use of supplemental feeds is a valuable aid in getting increased production at this time of the year. In feeding supplemental feeds, laying hens should be given all the moist mash or pellets they will clean up in about 30 minutes, fed daily about noon. Moist mash can be mixed with either water or milk. However, where milk is available it is much the more desirable. Under the food-for-victory program producers are urged to brood enough chicks the coming spring to replenish their flocks and to fill their laying houses to capacity. It is important to note that while poultry producers are urged to increase poultry production about 12 per cent the coming year that at the same time leaders in the poultry industry have advised against over crowding the birds and over expanding in the way of buying and building new equipment. Adequate equipment is now available on a sufficient number of farmers to take care of the increase desired in the poultry industry, if this equipment is used efficiently and a well planned program is followed.
