Wolverton, local ditch rider. He says because of the late dry fall there was no flood water available until late in 1944 and although the canal is now carrying about 230 second feet to the Hermiston reservoir the storage there is much shorter than usual at this season. The reservoir now contains about 34,000 acre feet instead of the normal 45,000. Usually the reservoir is filled by March 1. The water master reports that snow conditions in the mountains are favorable and it is believed there will be sufficient flood water in the river to fill the reservoir before summer.
