The Woman Who Talked!

The story about the group of persons in a railway coach somewhere in our own Northwest when a woman, talking loudly, proclaimed that she did not care how long the war lasted because her husband was making ten dollars a day and she was making big wages, a new experience for them, is not only applicable to her but to many others. When the middle-aged man confronted her and slapped her on one cheek with the remark that it was for one son killed in Pearl Harbor and then on the other cheek saying that it was for the second son killed at the same place and the silence of approval of fellow passengers grew so thick that the unthinking woman left the train represents well another present phase of our daily life. Many are thoughtless of the great tragedies while in the midst of big wages and large profits, and thousands of more patriotic and thinking people are growing more serious and less complacent as the terrible reports of continuous war around the entire globe are reported daily by radio, news commentators and news columns.

The man or woman who makes big wages or heavy profits should stop to think of the heroes that are falling from the skies or finding watery graves in all our oceans. He should, at least, save that money to purchase bonds, or against that rainy day when we must change from a war to a peace basis again. War brings waste in national affairs, but it is despicable for American citizens to gloat over the new opportunities and to spend their money wastefully while our boys fight for $21.00 per month and bleed and die on the battle fields.

To See What They Could See

A group of 26 Portland business men, en bus, came east of the Cascades this week to see what they could see, beyond the 300-mile coast defense limit. Newspapers report nothing, and authority tells nothing. Rumors report much and these float far and wide; grow bigger with time and distance. So our friends from the big city wanted to see with their own eyes what is what. They also wanted to discover how Hermiston handled 20,000 people last summer, lest they might be called on to take care of a Chicago dumped in on them unprepared, which is only a relative comparison. They were complimentary enough to say that someone had to do a lot of thinking to handle the job, but were told that it was not one, two or three who did the brainwork, but a whole community working cooperatively to meet the daily emergencies.

THEY CAN HANDLE THE TOUGH JOBS

The men and women in the Bell System are used to meeting emergencies and they are trained and equipped to carry on in times of special need. For years they have known the test of fire, flood and storm. That experience stands in good stead in this greatest emergency of our time. The Nation is counting on telephone workers to prove faithful to the task and they will not fail. Always before them is the tradition that the message must go through.
