ENSIGN FIX IN SPORT WRITEUP

Apparently Ensign George Eldon Fix, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Fix of Hermiston, is still majoring in sports. The following was printed in a sports column in the New York Post of Thursday, July 22.

"There were a number of bouts between Americans, British and French sailors. They were supervised by Ensign George E. Fix, who used to run for Oregon University. Fix is one of Commander Gene Tunney's boys who enlisted as a chief specialist and rose to the rank of Ensign.

"As a matchmaker he is superior to any in civilian life, not excepting Nat Rogers of the 20th Century S. C. Ensign Fix's card would have been a credit to Madison Square Garden and we hope we are invited to see next week's show."

Ensign Fix is stationed in Brooklyn, N. Y., in recreation and welfare work.

Earl January Breaks Neck

Earl January, who was picking apples on his ranch near the Tony Vey place on Butter Creek, suffered a broken neck last Saturday when the ladder, on which he was standing, broke. He apparently fell on his head, fracturing his neck. He managed to crawl to the house to call for help. The Hermiston ambulance was used by state police to haul Mr. January to St. Anthony's hospital in Pendleton where he apparently is getting along nicely.

U. O. D. NEWS

the needed parts from scrap iron or anything they could get their hands on right on the battlefield.

"The work of supply and maintenance was not done in buildings where everything was comfortable. It was done in the field where work was on the normal schedule of 24 hours a day, 7 days a week."

The Ordnance Field Service team, consisting of civilians and soldiers, is developed to perfection and was so reported by the British observer, who asserted that "the American supply and depot installations are outstanding and effective and are not bogged down with red tape. They should be followed and adopted, but under no condition criticized or modified."

The Army Ordnance Field Service system, which makes battle operations successful and minimizes loss of life, is under the direction of an Ordnance officer, Maj. Gen. E. S. Hughes, who is in charge of all supply functions under General Eisenhower. At no place visited was there any indication that there was a shortage of guns, tanks, or ammunition.

"It was a marvelous accomplishment," the report concluded, "and we may all be well proud of it."
