The Morning After The War

With the terrific bombing of Berlin and other German cities; with the recapture of Kartov and break through at other points on the Russian front; with the clearing of the Aleutians of the Nipponese and the successes in the South Seas, we are beginning to look forward to an end of the war, perhaps before 1945.

Already practical men and political heads are laying plans and beginning to think about what we shall do when the end does come. These plans have been delayed because of the probabilities of a long war, and have more particularly delayed to the public because of the uncertainties.

Leaders in all lines are now getting down to earth and are thinking along conservative ways and means to keep this country from a land slide backwards, and of helping other countries to restore themselves and avoid another world wide depression.

The first thought is the employment of great army of men who will be mustered out of the fighting forces and terminated in defense work at home. It is planned to restore industries to peace time work within a period of six months. This will require many men and women at work before actual production of peace time goods can begin. We will need much farm machinery, many automobiles, thousands of electrical appliances, much revamping of railroads and building of highways and waterways, and the manufacture of hundreds of consumer goods which have been denied us the past two or three years. Farming is expected to be good for several years as Europe will need food immediately, and livestock for several years.

It is reported that one government in exile is trying to place an order for 10,000 good dairy cows to be delivered as soon as peace is declared, and this is but an iota of the needs where over half the livestock has been taken from the conquered peoples.

It is anticipated that if our government and economic leaders can control the situation that will confront us the United States will have the greatest period of prosperity for several years known in its history. The present purpose is to back the war program to its limits of our resources and man power, in order to end the struggle and save the lives of our boys, but in the meantime we must lay plans to save our nation from economic distress after so much destruction has been and is still being caused.
