The Roving Reporter—I've been talking to a number of new employees and among the things I was looking for was their impression of our Ordinance. I was surprised to find that the thing that impressed them most was not the number of igloos or the trucks rolling by but the pleasant smiles of strangers and the pleasant words of friendliness.

Along the Ordinance Paths
Don't be alarmed if you find that we have snake charmers in our midst for the Trainmen have taken up animal training which sounds a little odd for the railroad gang. First they brought a large snake into the Yard

Office, placed it at Mr. Bowens feet, and watched developments. Mr. Bowen thought it was a floor mat until a closer inspection revealed such a nice pet. Harry Rhodes, who has no love for snakes jumped over two chairs, and well, we didn't say whether he screamed or not. Mr. Corey brought a rabbit and trained it for two days, and now it is back with its homefolk, probably training them. Mr. Smith tried to catch a quail but no luck. Keep trying boys, you may have a zoo yet.

Even small suggestions speed plans and supplies to our men at the various fronts. The suggestion committee gives every suggestion careful consideration. Your efforts are appreciated. Let's keep the boxes full.

To Someone, Somewhere

In my eye there is a tear.
On my lip there is a prayer.
In my heart there is a longing,
For someone, somewhere.

In my heart there is a picture
Of him lying there,
Sound asleep, and dreaming, also
Of someone, somewhere.

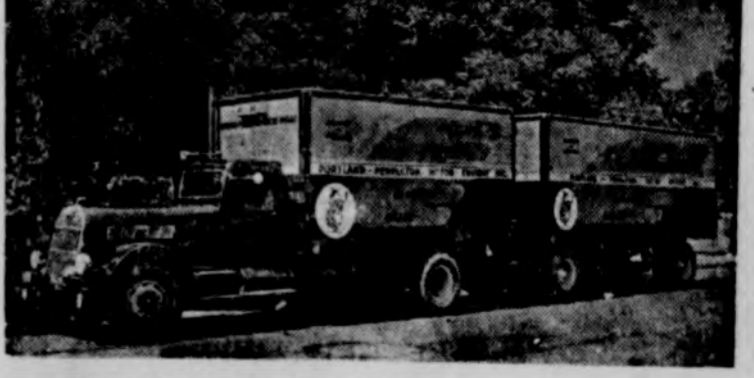

In my soul there is a constant hope,
That God will take care,
Watch over, protect, and guide
That someone, somewhere.

And where ever he may be,
On land, on sea, in the air,
I am sending all my love
To someone, somewhere.
