To help our boys out there.

If I could only have the strength
 To smash each and every gun,
 Plane, and ship in possession
 Of sons of the Rising Sun.

If I could only have the power
 To rise up and say
 "There must be peace and contentment
 The war must end today."

I can not have all these things
 But one thing I can do,
 Buy War Bonds and More War Bonds
 For the "Red, White, and Blue".
 —Colleen Bryson

Personnel celebrated Grace Henderson's birthday last Friday with cake and ice cream which were served during the lunch period. She was presented with a bee-u-tiful nightie.

Ode to the Old Nail Pullers
 Out in the Area near pier number nine
 Some working old men are pals of mine.

Their eyes are dim and they can't see far,
 So they tunk and hammer and yank with bar.

Thru rain and sleet and winter's fierce blast,
 Thru summer's hot winds that come at last.

They work for freedom's precious cause,
 E'en tho they falter and sometimes pause.

Are you saying they don't do much—
 How much will you do when aged as such!

Some have reached three score and ten,
 The end of the trail for most of our men.

Their sleep is fitful for they ache at night,
 From the job they've done as best they might.

Their sons are battling for life's sweet chance,

 Thru skies and mud of war scarred France,
 That down thru centuries that are to be
 All men of the world will ever be free.
 So let's give a cheer and all else due
 To these willing old men of the nail pulling crew.
