Wendell Willkie's Legacy To Us And The World

It is conceded that no man in private life has won such high praise from all walks of life in this country and throughout the world as did Wendell Willkie. Newspapers, radio, statesmen, and the great and near great have vied in honoring his character, vision, achievements, liberal views, his strength of mind, sincere purposes and courage. While such praise is natural at the time of a great man's passing, in the case of Wendell Willkie they are more profound and more sincere than perhaps any other man of the history of our country. The vein of thought running throughout the many comments is that during the brief period of his public life he shaped political thought at a crucial time in this country and the leading nations of the earth, more than any other man.

This is the legacy he left to the nation and to both political parties, and this legacy will grow in power in the ending of the war, in the dealing with other nations, and the establishment of a world peace, and restoration of this nation to sound economic basis. The echoes of his principles will be heard in the councils of the leaders in our country and in the greater councils of nations. His courage, his belief in America, his forward looking, his love of all men regardless of nationality, creed, color, walk in life, his liberalism and firmness for the right, will be symbols for leaders in national life for years to come.

Depredations continue throughout the community. Officers are kept busy and some apprehensions of culprits are made. But with all this effort the responsibility of the average citizen in being careful and alert, and in giving quick aid to the officers is not what it should be. Gasoline, tools, and other things about the place should be stored and under lock. Suspicious characters should be reported and careless acting should be noted. An officer cannot be expected to be here and there all the time, and should not be expected to stand guard on your property, or see that your doors are locked. Some parents should know better where their teen ages are at late hours. A little more vigilance and a little more assistance to the officers, and more stern respect for law and order on the part of citizens will help bring an end to this viciousness.

6TH WAR LOAN DRIVE SET FOR NOV. 20 TO DEC. 16

which are to be filled at the municipal election Nov. 7. The terms of A. C. Ebert as mayor and Nona H. McFaul as treasurer expire, and three councilmen, Murl Berry, Ed. Liesegang and John Oliver, complete their four year terms this year. Holdover councilmen, who have two years yet to serve are Joe Middleton, C. L. Gray and M. E. Coe. Clerks and judges for the municipal election were named at the council meeting Wednesday evening as follows: Mrs. Ray Tolar, Mrs. Wm. Helmick and Mrs. G. H. Frederick, judges, and Mrs. Ruth Middleton and Kate Liesegang, clerks.

Another party of Echo hunters returned home Wednesday evening bringing a deer for each of the hunters. The group, which was in the Wallowa country, included Carl Weltzin, Homer Coppinger, Wm. Helmick, Bob Spike and John Pedro.

FORD-BUILT B-24S GAS UP HOURLY AT WILLOW RUN

Almost every hour. Liberators at Ford's Willow Run bomber plant roll into their own special gas station and say, "fill'er up!"

Ford-built B-24 bombers can be "gassed" two at a time in perhaps the two largest filling stations in the world which use approximately 30,000 gallons of 100-octane gasoline and 1,100 gallons of oil every day.

The final stop a Ford Liberator makes before rolling into the open air is as impressive as her manufacture. Behind the bomber heavy fireproof doors become walls to close off the rest of the plant. In front of the ship doors that provide access to the field are run down. From overhead houses long tubes are lowered to the four openings in the ship's center wing, and within 10 or 15 minutes 1600 gallons of gas are pumped in for the initial test flight.

The high-octane gasoline is stored in six 25,000-gallon underground tanks connected to a pumping station and truck trailers carry fuel to ships already on the air-tort. For storing oil there are three underground supply tanks having a total capacity of 45,000 gallons.
The job of gassing each B-24 bomber is only one of the many duties assigned to Willow Run's gas crew. They also pre-oil the ship's four engines under pressure. Approximately 34 gallons of anti-icing fluid are pumped into special tanks. Hydraulic and oxygen lines are checked, and wing fuel cells and turrets are inspected, in addition to many other checks and inspections.
