Pfc. Ralph C. Steiner writes from "somewhere in Marianas" that he enjoyed a turkey dinner at Christmas time but "nothing can beat the turkey you cook, Dad."

Ralph is now a permanent guard on duty on one of the islands. He states that there are still Japs "hanging around" and are always trying to steal food.

He states that he saw a Jap while on duty the other day but did not get a shot. However, no soldier wanders alone into the wooded areas as he might not come back. They recently put up screens to keep out the giant mosquitoes.
