People invited to take free caregivers course

BY MAEGAN MURRAY
HERMISTON HERALD

When family members double as full-time caregivers for their loved ones, they may become overwhelmed with the responsibility it requires.

CAPECO Health Promotion Coordinator Helena Wolfe said caregivers can get so focused on the needs of the person for whom they are caring that they forget to take care of themselves. She said that can cause the caregiver's health to decline, and, in some cases, they may pass away before their loved ones.

With a returning set of classes for family caregivers, however, people in Hermiston and Pendleton can learn some tools that Wolfe said will help them effectively care for their loved ones and themselves.

"This class isn't about how to take care of someone else," she said. "It is about learning how to take care of yourself while taking care of someone else."

The program, called "Powerful Tools for Caregivers," will feature six classes that will take place from 2 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Mondays, beginning Jan. 12, at Good Shepherd Medical Center. Classes will also be offered from 9:30 a.m. to noon Tuesdays, beginning Jan. 13, at the CAPECO main office, 721 S.E. Third St, Pendleton. There is no cost to attend, and each class participant will receive a copy of "The Caregiver Helpbook" to accompany the class content.

Wolfe said the sessions will feature interactive lessons, discussions and brainstorming that will help caregivers take the tools they choose and put them to action. The class will address how family caregivers can reduce stress; how to effectively communicate with other family members, doctors and paid help; how caregivers can still take care of themselves; and how to reduce guilt, anger and depression. The class will also teach caregivers ways to relax, how to make tough decisions and how to set goals and problem solve.

Wolfe said class sizes are limited and interested participants must contact her by Saturday to register for the class. Those signing up to participate must also attend the first class, though they may miss one or two of the other classes.

For those needing respite care for their family members during that time, Wolfe said organizers can work with participants to provide that care while they attend the classes each week.

Wolfe said past classes have been well received.

"It has a really good reputation," she said. "People said it has been really worthwhile for them."

For more information and to register, contact Wolfe at 541-561-5443, or email her at hwolfe@capeco-works.org. When registering, let Wolfe know if respite care is needed.

Caregivers who cannot attend the class this session are encouraged to call and ask to be put on a waiting list for a future class.

"If someone can't do it now, they can still contact me," she said. "All we need is to have a good handful of people so we can offer it again."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Master Gardener 2015 accepting enrollment

Master Gardener 2015 training is scheduled to begin Feb. 5, 2015. Applications currently are being accepted. For an application packet and additional information, contact OSU

Umatilla County Extension Service at 541-278-5403. Application materials also are available online at the Extension's website: <http://extension.oregonstate.edu/umatilla/mg>.

Gardeners at any level looking to learn more and share this common labor of love with others should submit their applications by Jan. 31 to reserve a seat.

Classes will be taught by OSU Extension agents, specialists and local garden and landscaping experts. The program offers a basic, practical course in plant science and includes topics such as plant disease identification and treatment, weed control, insect identification with integrated pest management control, understanding soil types and fertility needed for specific plant species, growing healthy vegetables, lawn maintenance, home orchard care and general organic garden techniques, to mention a few.

The Master Gardening 2015 classes take place from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. with a half-hour lunch break Thursdays, Feb. 5 through March 26, 2015, in the conference room at the Hermiston Ag Research and Extension Center, 2121 S. First St, Hermiston. The class fee is $115, which includes the course textbook, "Sustainable Gardening: The Oregon-Washington Gardener Handbook" (a $30 value). A refund of $50 of the class fee can be earned upon completion of 30 hours of volunteer service through activities such as helping in demonstration gardens that deliver produce to organizations that feed the hungry, participating in plant clinic events (e.g. Farmer's Market education outreach) and several other community outreach venues, and answering on-call questions from the extension office.

Scholarship and FAFSA fair Saturday

Eastern Promise volunteers will help Echo and Stanfield high school students prepare Free Application for Federal Student Aid forms at a scholarship and FAFSA fair from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at Stanfield Secondary School, 1120 N. Main St. The event will give high school students the opportunity to receive help with filling out the FAFSA form, as well as with making plans to earn college credits while still in high school through the Eastern Promise. College credits through the Eastern Promise cost just $10 per credit.
