After graduation she married Royce Eldon Wahner, a returning Marine, at the Pendleton Episcopal Church on October 23, 1947. They were married for 64 years before his death in February 2012.

Pat worked in food service as a waitress, a cook out at Hinkle and Desert Lanes Bowling Alley. She worked for Vend Music and as a teller in a local bank.

She won the Bicentennial Championship Bowling Tournament at Denver in 1976. Pat loved to cook, bake and can foods. She won ribbons and awards at the Umatilla County Fair. Her contributions to dinners were always sought after, especially her pies. In 1980 she won the Oregon State Wheat League Cake Baking contest. Rodeo was something she loved and attended until she could no longer climb the bleachers to get to her season ticket seat but continued to watch Rodeo on TV. She loved the Blazers but after she moved back to Stanfield the satellite did not cover very many of their games.

She loved to watch game shows and televised sports. She was a monthly financial supporter of Agape House and Campus Life. She was a member of the "Has Been, Wanna Bees" singing group who sang at the local prison, nursing homes and other local functions.

Stanfield bans pot businesses

By SEAN HART
Staff Writer

Pot businesses will not find a home in Stanfield.

City Manager Blair Larsen said the City Council unanimously approved an ordinance last week prohibiting both medical and recreational marijuana facilities.

While the majority of Oregon voters in 2014 approved Measure 91 — which legalized recreational marijuana and created a permitting process for pot businesses — 63 percent of Umatilla County voters opposed it. House Bill 3400, passed in the legislative session this year, allowed local governments in counties where at least 55 percent of voters opposed the measure to ban pot businesses.

Larsen said, after the bill passed, he informed the council, which instructed him to draft an ordinance enacting a ban.

"I found some examples (of similar ordinances) and brought it before them, and it was unanimous," he said. "I don't think it really changes anything because I don't think we were in danger of having any shops open up."

Larsen said, however, the ban has consequences. He said the city will no longer be entitled to the tax revenue generated from marijuana sales, but he did not believe it would not have a significant fiscal impact on the city.

"Our population is so small that I don't know that we would have gotten that much in the first place," he said. "And then after two years, they're not going on population (for tax distribution), they're going to base it on where the retail shops open up, so the only way to get any tax money is if you have a shop and it's based on how many shops you have."

Larsen said the facilities ban does not affect the non-business aspects of Measure 91. The measure legalized the possession and private use of marijuana by adults and the private cultivation of up to four plants at a residence.

"You can still use in the privacy of your own home," Larsen said. "I believe you can still grow in your back yard as long as it's out of public view. You just can't open up a shop." The ordinance, which took effect immediately, states the city will use "any and all enforcement remedies available" to shut down any facilities in violation of the ordinance, including nuisance laws and court action.

It also repealed a previous ordinance that regulated the time, place and manner of medical marijuana sales because the businesses are banned entirely.
