

Spring chinook season extended on Umatilla

Salmon, lampry numbers unexpectedly high

HERMISTON HERALD

The spring chinook salmon season on the lower Umatilla River from the Highway 730 bridge to Threemile Dam has been extended through June 30, because of a strong return of fish to Threemile Dam. "After a slow start to chinook run, the numbers have pick up enough this month that we can offer some additional fishing opportunity," said Bill Duke, ODFW district fish biologist in Pendleton, in a release. To date, 2,400 spring chinook have been counted at Threemile Dam and anglers have harvested 450 fish.

The season had originally been set to close after June 10.

The daily bag limit will continue to be two adipose fin-clipped adult chinook and five fin-clipped jacks. Jack salmon are less than 24 inches long. A combined angling tag is required for this fishery.

Anglers do not need to record jack catch on their combined angling tags, but it is illegal to continue fishing for jack chinook once the adult bag limit is met. Unmarked wild fish must be released carefully and unharmed.

The Umatilla River from Threemile Dam to the CTUIR reservation boundary is also open for spring chinook through June 30. However, anglers will find limited numbers of chinook in this area as all adult fish collected at Threemile Dam are being transported upstream and released into the upper Umatilla River.

Record numbers of Pacific lampry have also made a splash in the Umatilla River.

Scientists with the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation counted more the 2,600 of the prehistoric fish migrating up the Eastern Oregon river to spawn this spring, according to the Bonneville Power Administration.

The fish are native to the Columbia River Basin and significant to American Indian people.

Guilty plea for DUII homicide

HERMISTON HERALD

Anthony King Enriquez of Ukiah drove drunk in March and killed his friend in a crash. Now he's going to prison for the crimes.

Enriquez, 42, pleaded guilty last week in Morrow County Circuit Court to criminal negligent homicide and driving under the influence of intoxicants, District Attorney Justin Nelson reported. Circuit Judge Eva Temple sentenced Enriquez to five years, five months in state prison in accordance to a plea deal. Enriquez will receive credit for the time he spent in the Umatilla County Jail, Pendleton, following the crash.

Nelson said Enriquez and Joshua Herrig, 35, were friends and occasionally worked together. They met during the lunch hour on March 21 and purchased three cases of Budweiser.

"They then met back up after work (around 5 p.m.) and decided to go to lone for dinner," according to Nelson. "The two then left for lone in Mr. Herrig's work truck with Mr. Enriquez driving the vehicle. Mr. Enriquez stated that he drove because Mr. Herrig was too intoxicated to drive."

Enriquez reported he looked down at his phone at 5:33 p.m., Nelson stated, and when he looked up he was off the road. He over-corrected, the pickup crossed the highway and he over-corrected again. The pickup rolled, ejecting Herrig. He died at the scene.

Enriquez got out of the vehicle and admitted to being the driver and to consuming three beers before the crash, Nelson stated. A blood draw two hours after the crash showed Enriquez had a blood alcohol content of .19 percent, more than twice the legal limit of .08 percent.

Nelson also said his office and the victim assistance office kept Herrig's family informed of the status of this case and consulted them prior to accepting the plea deal. Herrig's mother and sister gave statements to the court at the sentencing hearing.

to LCR Construction for more information hasn't yet been returned, but the permit, issued in May, is for a 2,832 square foot automatic car wash.

Streets around Hermiston will be blocked off July 8-10 for slurry seal projects.

Contractors will be working on Orchard Avenue from SW 11th Street to Highway 395 on those days. Also included in the project are downtown parking lots, and portions of Jennie Avenue, Southwest Seventh Street, Southwest Ninth Street, Moore Avenue, Southwest Butte Drive and single downtown blocks of East Gladys Avenue, East Newport Avenue, East Hurlburt Avenue and East Ridge-way Avenue.

Contractors will work with surrounding residents and businesses to try to minimize the effects of the maintenance, according to a news release from the city of Hermiston. A map of all the projects is available on the city's website at hermiston.or.us.

The projects — part of the city's Street Preservation Program using gas tax funds — will cost approximately $115,000 and will prolong the life of the roads where a Type II Slurry Seal is applied. The city completed the same type of slurry seal along Highland Avenue in 2016.

Though many students are done with school for the summer, the Intermountain Education Service District's migrant education program started this week. 180 students from preschool through eighth grade are taking classes, held at Sunset Elementary School, from 8 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., until June 29. The students will receive instruction in reading, math and science. Hermiston Education Foundation representative Loretta Fitterer said it was the largest class in the summer program in more than a decade. Classes also started in Irrigon this week, and will start in Umatilla next week.
