Fire district sizzles with new equipment

People who receive services from first responders served by Boardman Rural Fire Protection will benefit from new equipment recently obtained.

Capt. Adam Cole said the department is the proud recipient of four Lucas 3 CPR Compression Units.

The equipment assists first responders during cardiac events when chest compressions are needed. CPR chest compression units, Cole said, deliver consistent chest compressions under difficult conditions and for extended periods of time.

The purchase was made possible with support from AWS InCommunities, a program with Amazon Web Services Infrastructure, which focuses on community stewardship where the company built its cloud.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Invest in Hermiston schools to help community

Hermiston has the opportunity in November to again invest in its young people who are our future.

The Hermiston School District is proposing a bond that will fund adequate classroom space for its students. It's a package that takes into consideration the growing student enrollment and the priorities of residents.

Support for a school bond such as this is an investment, and we see the returns every day. Graduates of the Hermiston school system are a huge part of our community. We're lucky to live in a place that adds jobs and housing at a pace that welcomes alumni to return and give back to their community.

It's incredible to look around at the number of businesses started or managed by Hermiston graduates. Alumni are stepping up into service clubs, nonprofit boards and volunteer positions. At Hermiston High School, more than a quarter of the teachers were once Bulldogs themselves.

These were students who came up through a district supported by the community. They attended first-rate schools with outstanding teachers and staff. Our Hermiston residents made this possible by supporting school bonds.

Students in Hermiston again need our support. The school district is asking for a bond that will set the next generation up for success and make sure Hermiston remains a vibrant and connected community.

Please join us in voting yes for Hermiston schools.

City lacks post cards

Not one place in Hermiston, not even the chamber of commerce, has post cards to sell about Hermiston and the surrounding areas.
