Fire district conducts water rescue

HERMISTON HERALD

Umatilla County Fire District 1 conducted a water rescue in the Umatilla County river on the evening of Monday, July 27.

According to a news release from the district, emergency crews responded to the the river near Umatilla for a report of a person who was stranded in the river after reportedly hitting a rock while cliff jumping.

The release stated the patient had suffered "severe, non-life threatening injuries" that caused them to be unable to get to safety on their own power. UCFD1 reported it took 90 minutes for two command rigs, two engine companies, and a rope rescue team to rescue the patient.

The fire district put out a reminder for people to practice caution around water as temperatures continue to rise, and to remember that murky water can be hiding submerged objects. Many popular cliff jumping locations also have turbulent conditions that can suck people underwater, and hypothermia is still possible even when the air around the river is hot.

PET OF THE WEEK

Reece is a very chill & sweet old man that is about 10 years old. He loves to be around his people, but not super cuddly, but he loves to have his ears rubbed. He loves to sit outside in the shade and feel the wind on his face. Reece does have some aging issues, is on a strict diet for his weight and will need regular grooming. Due to his age and health, we prefer he isn't around young children.

ARCO settlement checks coming

HERMISTON HERALD

More than a million Oregonians who used a debit card to buy gas at an Oregon ARCO am/pm gas station between Jan. 1, 2011, and Aug. 30, 2013, will receive a check in the mail for $94.42 in the coming weeks.

According to a news release from Oregon Consumer Justice, the checks are not a scam and can be cashed or deposited. They are part of a settlement of a class action lawsuit against the oil company BP, which lawyers argued illegally charged Oregonians a 35 cent debit card fee during the time period above.
