YELLOWSTONE'
REIMAGINES 'THE GODFATHER'

I'm a bit late to this party, but this year I became a fan of the series "Yellowstone," the Paramount Network's hit show that is returning for a fifth season.

Paramount premiered "Yellowstone" in 2018 to help launch its then-fledgling streaming service. The show takes place in Montana and follows the Dutton family, who controls the largest contiguous cattle ranch in the United States.

Ranching is hard work, and in this show, it's deadly, with shoot-outs, double-crosses, murder and business as war. All of that on top of the relationship turmoil of the Duttons.

What hooked me was "Yellowstone" in many respects is a modern-day take on a classic of American cinema: the Godfather franchise.

Kevin Costner portrays patriarch John Dutton, who is smart and ruthless and devoted to family and his ranch and runs it much like Don Vito Corleone ran his operations. Certain cowboys even brand themselves to show their loyalty and earn respect.

John Dutton has a number of children and close relationships who have parallels with Don Corleone's children — Sonny, Michael and Fredo — and Tom Hagen, consigliere and head lawyer of the Corleone family.

For example Kayce Dutton is the youngest of the Dutton children and a former Navy SEAL who you can see is one day going to run the operation. That's a lot like Michael Corleone, youngest of the Don's sons, who seems reluctant to be involved in his family business but also is the only one to have served as a soldier in war and becomes his father's successor.

And Jamie Dutton, an attorney and aspiring politician, is the middle son and a ringer for Fredo Corleone — both willing to go against the family to fulfill their desires to amount to something important.

There's more, but you get the gist.

"Yellowstone" begins filming its fifth season in May, so it should drop in the fall. Fans also will be getting a longer season this time split in two. Cliffhanger coming for sure.

New releases

'A WALK AROUND THE
SUN,' ERIKA LEWIS

There's a sense of urgency in the lyrics of "A Walk Around the Sun," a hidden gem of a country-Americana project by a singer-songwriter known previously as the singer in a brassy French Quarter busker band called Tuba Skinny.

The 11 songs Lewis wrote represent a departure from tourist-friendly New Orleans street music. They soar not just on the loveliness of her voice but on emotional intensity and the preciousness of time.

The songs range in style from pure helpings of Patsy Cline-style country to songs with more drive that still manage to be calming. In the adventurously melodic "Wild Thing," for example, Lewis works territory that recalls the best work of Chris Isaak.
