PENDLETON — After two years of being virtual, Rock & Roll Camp will again bring about 100 teenagers to the Pendleton Center for the Arts for a week of music.

The camp, for ages 13-18, runs Aug. 8-12. It is completely free.

Whether a teen is a singer, aspiring music journalist, interested in the off-stage jobs of music or an experienced or first-time musician, PCA's Rock & Roll Camp offers a learning opportunity for all.

Acoustic and electric guitars, ukuleles, drum kits and other instruments are available for free loan during the camp. Teens are also encouraged to bring instruments they play, including strings and brass.

Registration is now open at www.pendletonarts.org or in person at the Pendleton Center for the Arts, 214 N. Main St. Early registration is recommended, as the camp is limited to 100 participants.

More information is available at the center, by calling 541-278-9201 or emailing director@pendletonarts.org.

Showcase Concert

Participants in the Rock & Roll Camp will give a showcase concert at 7 p.m. Friday, Aug. 12, on Main Street in Pendleton.

The camp, Aug. 8-12, is free for ages 13-18. Enrollment is limited to 100; register at www.pendletonarts.org or call 541-278-9201.

ABOUT THE CAMP

Addison Schulberg is the 2022 camp director. He attended the camp for six years himself, then served as a volunteer and instructor.

He now "leads the group of 15 to 20 Northwest musicians who pour their heart and soul into making sure that teens have a week they will always remember," said Roberta Lavadour, PCA director.

For one week from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. every day, campers can learn to write songs, play an instrument, form a band and hone their stage presence with the help of West Coast indie band mentors. Campers who are interested in journalism will have the opportunity to learn from topflight music journalists Casey Jarman and Michael Heald.

Teens who are interested in off-stage jobs can learn about photography, videography, zines, sound mixing, graphic design, marketing/social media content and how to set up sound systems. These artistic campers will combine their variety of talents to help create the camp zine that will encapsulate their epic week of fun and learning.

To finish off the week, campers will have the chance to show off their new rock 'n' roll skills to family and friends at the camp showcase concert. The concert will be held on Friday, Aug. 12, on Main Street at 7 p.m.
