STARVED OUT.

The Wallula Herald has suspended publication on account of lack of support. This is the second paper that has died at Wallula from the same cause, and the town is now without one. The people of such a community, by allowing the local paper to die of starvation, certainly place themselves before their neighbors in no enviable light. What a collection of fossils, mossbacks and iguonamuses a town must be that will not accord the scanty support necessary to keep a local paper alive, for the publisher usually keeps up the struggle as long as he has the least encouragement, and sometimes lives a long while on the hope of better times. In proportion to the profit realized, the country publisher has more capital invested and works harder than any other man in the community, farmers not excepted, and the local paper is the most important factor in building up the town and surrounding country. Most people realize this fact, but there are occasional towns like Wallula where the residents are so short-sighted that they imagine the patronage extended to a local paper as that much money thrown away or given in charity—and such people are not very strong on charity. We are glad to say that the people of Lexington and Morrow county are, for the most part, of a different stamp, know the value of a local paper and act accordingly.

The New Year number of the San Jose (Cal.) Daily Mercury is a magnificent specimen of enterprising journalism. Besides a vast amount of matter descriptive of San Jose, the surrounding country and neighboring towns, it contains a large number of illustrations taken from photographs of street scenes, public buildings, fine farms and private residences. Neatly printed on good paper, its value is enhanced by an attractive typographical appearance.

On the 27th of last month Charles Shaner, of Oakland, Cal., drew $1,100 from the bank, paid bills to the amount of $200, gave his wife $20 for shopping purposes and then went over to San Francisco on a high old jam. When a 'Frisco cop pulled him out of the gutter at four o'clock the next morning he was loaded with mud, whisky and remorse, and had just $22.60 and two black eyes. Mr. Shaner swore off on New Year's day.

Last Sunday afternoon a cyclone struck the southwestern section of St. Louis and swept on through the northern limits, making a pathway nearly a quarter of a mile wide and leaving death and destruction in its track. Several lives were lost and many persons were injured. Trees were torn up by the roots and broken off; telegraph poles were swept down, and the roofs of buildings were lifted and tossed into the streets.

A severe blizzard began last Saturday night in Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska and raged during Sunday and Sunday night. In many places it was the most severe ever experienced. A peculiar feature of the storm is its occurrence on the anniversary of the terrible blizzard of two years ago, when so many people perished from the cold.

Dense the past week fearful storms, blizzards, cyclones and tornadoes have occurred in many states east of the Rocky mountains, causing loss of life and destruction of property. In Morrow county all is serene, with good weather for the season and no extremes of any kind.

SENATOR CULLOM has introduced a bill authorizing the secretary of the treasury to loan money to farmers at two per cent. If this bill passes there will be rejoicing among the farmers throughout the United States.

A ROBBER visited the towns of Clinton and Moscow, Kentucky, last Sunday evening, killing eleven persons and wounding many others at Clinton, besides destroying a large amount of property.

WORTHY OF PRAISE.

Just outside of San Francisco harbor, recently, a fishing boat was capsized and four of the crew drowned in the breakers. The fifth was dashed upon Point Bonita rock and managed to clamber up to the top and hold on against the heavy wind and dashing waves. In this position he was seen by the lookout on a tug, which on account of the rough weather was unable to render any assistance, but she ran to Meiggs' wharf and the circumstance was telephoned to the life-saving station at the Cliff house and to the various newspapers. The "life-savers" were utterly unable to meet the emergency for which the station is maintained, but a tug chartered by the Examiner and with two reporters aboard made all speed to the rescue. The man was found still upon his perch, alone with the darkness and the roaring waters which sought to engulf him. After a struggle with the mad waves and a display of indomitable bravery by the reporters, the fisherman, half-crazed by exposure to the wind and icy waters, was rescued and taken to San Francisco. This was unknown to the other newspapers, which appeared next morning with an account of the perilous position of the fisherman and the prediction that he must have been washed off and drowned in the breakers of the rising tide; but the Examiner not only got in a brilliant "scoop," publishing a full-page account of the night's adventure, but saved a human life from the relentless breakers. Words are feeble to express the commendation due the two reporters, H. R. Haxton and Allen Kelly, who volunteered to risk their lives for another. The proprietor of the Examiner presented each of them with $200 and a gold watch.

FARMERS' CLUBS.

Speaking of granges, alliances and farmers' clubs generally, the Pacific Farmer of Portland says: These organizations would be a mutual help to farmers. In them they would learn what their neighbors are doing for the general good. They would understand the situation of the markets; they would know better when, how and where to market their produce; they would form mutual insurances; they would consolidate their trade with firms that would deal honestly with them at fair profits; they would make such arrangements that all small articles could be sent to them at cost from the cities and towns where they trade. There would not be so much better-seller chance about their crops, for they would have such information as would enable them to better to judge what sort of a crop to put in; they would all be better posted as to the best modes of preparing the ground, planting, cultivating and harvesting, as well as to the best farm implements in use; and a thousand other things which would add to the wealth, health, happiness and comfort of the farmer.

At Waukesha, Wisconsin, a female prisoner recently escaped from the jail. Thereupon the sheriff mounted his faithful bicycle, and after a hot chase of half an hour the runaway was recaptured.

There must be a great deal of litigation in Seattle, or else pretty hard times among the lawyers, for it is reported that there are two hundred attorneys in that city.

AFTER a long and painful illness, ex-Governor George L. Woods died in Portland on Tuesday last week.

A Gentle Hint. The editor sat on his golden throne. As editors usually do; His gold watch ticked, his diamonds shone. Footstools perfumed the air with cologne, And yet the editor was blue—so blue. Oh, why was the editor blue? Because his subscribers, a few, had forgot To settle their bills when due. He sorrowed for them—love and toil their lot Would be in eternity feeling so hot. All in a sort of a stew; Like him in a sort of a stew—Er.

The smuggling of Chinamen into the United States across the British Columbia frontier has assumed scandalous proportions.

Morton D. Clifford, of Canyon City, has been appointed by the governor to succeed the late Judge Ison as circuit judge of the sixth judicial district.

Tacoma physicians say that 90 per cent of the deaths in that city are caused by drinking impure water. The water supply remains as it is at present, and investors and persons who desire to locate in a prosperous community will give Tacoma a wide berth.

"Golly!" gasped little Johnny as he finished the second crock of stolen preserves. "I feel as if I had been smoking pa's pipe."—Judge.

It has been discovered that kisses—love kisses we mean—are full of electricity. Now we know why old maids have always called kissing stockings.—Boston Courier.

The drug store keepers of Kansas look mournfully on the burning corn of that fertile state. Properly treated, corn brings a pretty income to a Kansas druggist.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The chief secret of comfort lies in not suffering trifles to vex us, and in prudently cultivating our undergrowth of small pleasures, since very few great ones, alas! are let on long leases.—Sharp.

The manager of the Vernonia is having a set of placards painted to decorate the rooms of the hotel. They will read as follows: "Don't blow out the gas. A number of other fools have been killed that way. If you don't know how to turn it off, ring the bell and the boy will show you how."—Nashua Journal.

A New York physician says it would take 100 lines of newspaper print to describe in technical terms the cause and effect of a boil. No one cares for any such medical flapdoodle. One or two lines, and those consisting of " * * * and ! ! ! " answer every purpose until the infernal thing busts.—Detroit Free Press.

No man deserves the attention of the police more than the one who gets a warm place by the stove and keeps it while his horse, tied to an unfeeling hitching post, is shivering outside. He is more of a criminal than the pilgrim on life's rough way whose enthusiastic nature leads him into the error of getting drunk.—Cheney Sentinel.

Each one of us is bound to make the little circle in which he lives better and happier. Each of us is bound to see that out of that small circle the widest good may flow. Each of us may have fixed in his mind the thought that out of a single household may flow influences that shall stimulate the whole civilized world.—Dean Stanley.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Jug Tavern is the name of a prosperous village in Georgia.

More patents were issued in 1889 than in any preceding year.

There are forty feet of snow on some of the Central Pacific sheds.

There have been some sixteen outbreaks of influenza in Russia since 1830.

A bootblack in Chicago managed to buy and distribute five turkeys among as many very poor families. A shining example, indeed.

Only twenty of the more than 400 members of both houses of congress are of foreign origin. Four of the twenty are senators—Pascé, McMillan, Beck and Jones.

Farming is more progressive than any other branch of industry. If a farmer does not keep pace with the advancing progress of the age, he had better seek some other employment. It is no use to sell out and seek some richer soil or more propitious climate. Work, constant and intelligent, is required in all climates and lands.

A Boston reporter has canvassed the penal institutions of Massachusetts without being able to find a prisoner who would admit his guilt of the crime for which he was arrested, tried and sentenced by a jury. Each and every one claimed prejudice or unfair ruling, and each one considered himself a martyr to the cause of justice.

The New York Herald last week published dispatches from nineteen states, showing that the prospects for the adoption of the Australian ballot law are excellent in all of them. In many instances modifications are desired, but the disposition to regard the new system as a desirable and necessary one is general among the leading officials.

A Missouri tramp who was at the end of his rope gave himself up as a murderer wanted in Maine, and he thus got five months of food and shelter and lodging before it was ascertained that he had never been as far east as Chicago in his life. He said it was the third time he had played the trick, and it always put fifteen pounds of flesh on him.

San Francisco plumbers seem to be extremely curious in the matter of making finds. One recently on the roof of a house found a human leg. Investigation developed the fact that it formerly belonged to the anatomy of a workman who had been blown up at a boiler explosion, three months before, several blocks away. What could be found of him was buried at the time, but this leg was minus.

Brussels sprouts seeds are sown in drills three or four inches apart and the plants thinned out afterward as needed. The culture is precisely the same as that given to cabbages. The miniature cabbages after a little frost are as tender as cauliflower. A bushel of sprouts will bring as much, usually, as a barrel of cauliflower, while the yield per acre will not be materially less. It is surprising that Brussels sprouts are not found in every private garden, as they are among the most palatable of vegetables and easy to grow.
