Our grocery men are having a hard time supplying the demand for cheese these days, for it is said that one of our old maids ate half a pound the other evening and dreamed that she had a man, which is said to account for this sudden demand.

An exchange says—Rabbit-eaters take notice; Examinations made by physicians and by veterinarians show that rabbits generally are afflicted with a tubercular disease closely resembling tuberculosis. There are running sores on the little animal's sides, and in many instances these sores are difficult to detect beneath the fur, but a good microscope will make them plain. The disease is easily transmitted to the human race, so you had better examine your rabbits well before indulging your appetite. This is not a "josh," but a serious fact.
