SENTENCE SERMONS

By Henry F. Cope.

Light from above is for the path below.

He cannot grind wisdom who will not worship.

Many things may keep you from the other triumphs of life, but only selfishness can keep you from the victory of love.

No man climbs to the Father by treading on his brother.

The shepherd's crook does not make the crooked sheep.

Many fail through success, while others succeed through failure.

The flowers of triumph are watered by tears.

No man is brave until he has overcome the fear of being called a coward.

Stealing sorrow is as much a sin as acquiring stolen joys.

When generosity is a surgical operation it is often fatal to the patient.

Clothes do not make the man, though they often mark his mind.

The shrewd man seldom has sense enough to know that he cannot be satisfied so long as his soul is starved.

If the black sheep were more common no one would stop to count them.

The man whose thoughts seem to be in heaven is never so far from earth as when the offering is being taken.

The godly man is not likely to be good unless he believes in the goodness of his God.

It is better to be the fool soon parted from his money than the miser whose soul is buried with it.

When some men send a dollar to heaven they want to receive the earth for a rebate.

The fact that a man is all puffed up with pride will not mitigate the jar when he takes his fall.
