

LEXINGTON WHEATFIELD

RELIGION.

The Editor of The Wheatfield has kindly given this column for religious purposes. It will be edited by the church people who will no doubt be glad to receive matter from all who are interested in church work. Communications should be addressed, Religious Editor Wheatfield, Lexington, Oregon.

REVIVAL SERVICES.

Meetings for men women and young people.

Evangelist Frank A. Miller, of Elgin, Ills. arrived Tuesday evening from lone where such a remarkable meeting has just closed, and began a union evangelistic meeting in Lexington. There was a fine crowd at the opening service and it is hoped that these meetings will prove a great blessing to the people of our churches and to those outside of any church. There will be services at 3 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. this week and Chalk talks next week at close of public school with coupon tickets free to all the young people of our public school.

FOR MEN ONLY.

Mr. Miller will give a talk to men next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Congregational church on the subject. "Three fatal steps in the life of a young man." Let every man about Lexington please to attend this service and hear this talk which stirred lone to the depths. Tickets will be distributed announcing the services and a large crowd is expected. In Walla Walla Wash. the crowd packed the Kaylor Grand Theatre with chairs in aisles and were deeply moved. At the same hour the women will meet at the Methodist church and Mr. Miller will speak to them for ten minutes at 3 o'clock sharp, while the men are conducting the opening service in the Congregational church, then the service will be led by women.

WOMEN TOMORROW.

Mr. Miller will speak to women and girls tomorrow Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Congregational church on "Three great questions touching the home." Every woman should hear this earnest plea for better homes and better manhood and womanhood.

Let us all plan to attend these meetings as they must be limited to a few days.

Owing to the revival services being conducted at the Congregational church the regular preaching services of the Methodist church are called in for next Sunday, both morning and evening.

There will be Sunday school at 10 o'clock at the Methodist church Sunday morning as usual and the regular Epworth League services at 7 p. m.

The pastor of the Lexington Methodist church requests us to say through the columns of our paper that he trusts that the members of his church will lend their aid in every way they can to the revival services now being conducted at the Congregational church.

One who can not rejoice at the success of revival services in a church else than their own is either lacking in the true christian spirit, or else in mental endowment, oft-times both.

Good churches enhance the value of every dollars worth of property in the community where these churches are situated hence from the very lowest of motives, personal interest, every citizen of Lexington and surrounding community should lend his aid to the revival services being conducted at the Congregational church.

The revival meetings here have been successful beyond the most sanguine expectations of the churches of our city. They have met with far greater success than any other revival meetings that have visited our city in the past, having over one hundred conversions. Many of the leading business men of the city have been added to the list of Christians, and Rev. Miller who is conducting the meetings will close them Sunday night with a long list of new friends.—Proclaimer.

The lone city council is now holding an open meeting and will probably do so the rest of the month in order to rush the installment of our electric light plant. The money has been raised and the council is now open for bids from firms to furnish the material. They expect to install a 500 16-candle power dynamo and will put in about 300 lights now, already having calls for nearly that number. The total income of the water works for January was $83.25 and that for February will be over $100. With the city water-works now on a paying basis electric lights, which can be run with the same engine which is now in use, there will be a revenue coming in from this source.
