University of Oregon
The University office this year will give especial attention to its press service in the interest of tax-payers, the idea being that citizens helping in the support of State institutions have a right to know intimately what those institutions are offering in return.

Besides the residence work offered in Law, Medicine, Engineering, and the various courses in the Liberal Arts Colleges, the University offers special work in Correspondence Study, for the benefit of all those unable to avail themselves of residence study. All of these courses are free of cost to the student enrolling and taking the work, except for a small amount to cover postage, the total cost to each student being one dollar for each course enrolled in. The only requirement for admission to any course is ability to carry on the work and profit by the instruction given. In every case instruction is personal; the student receives individual attention.

University Correspondence Study is proving popular throughout the state, and is immensely valuable not only to Public and High School teachers, Study Clubs, farmers and individuals who never expect to avail themselves of residence study, but also to those preparing to matriculate at the University. A concrete example is offered in the experience of James Ryder, of Newberg. Last January Ryder registered for Correspondence study in Analytical Geometry, and the papers which he sent in were high grade. Upon entering the University for residence work this fall, the work which he did last year in Analytical Geometry entitled him to take the course in Calculus, a regular Sophomore Engineering subject. The backbone of an Engineering course is made up of required courses which must be taken in sequence, and must all be completed before the degree in Engineering can be given. The Engineering degree proper is not given in any of the larger institutions under five years of required work. It is so at the University of Oregon. But the advanced standing of one year which Ryder received on account of his Correspondence work, coupled with Summer work, if he wishes to take it, will make it possible for him to graduate in three years, and receive his regular Engineering degree in four years, which time is ordinarily required for simple graduation. This course, however, he would not be able to pursue if he had not already worked off this course in Freshman Mathematics before entering.

Oscar Stranahan, youngest son of C. H. Stranahan, met with a serious accident at The Dalles Thursday night, in which he lost his leg. According to the trainmen, young Stranahan was riding on the bumpers of the fast mail train and fell under the wheels as the train was pulling into The Dalles. He was found by a brakeman a few minutes after the accident occurred, rolling about in agony in front of the Umatilla House. An ambulance was summoned and the injured man taken to The Dalles hospital, where he was given immediate medical attention and his father communicated with by telephone. The latter caught the 11:55 east bound train and arrived in The Dalles a few hours after the accident. The injured leg was so badly mangled that it was found necessary to amputate it just below the knee. The young man stood the operation well and is reported as recovering as well as could be expected. —Hood River News.
