Have Children During Their School days Acquire the Habit of Visit-Ing Picture Galleries.

A small lassie was conducted by her mother on a tour of the Layton gallery and the established etiquette for art galleries in general was being included as a part of her instruction for the day. Standing before a particularly prosaic-looking canvas, she found it convenient to divert her mind by utilizing the brass railing as a trapeze-thereby developing the muscles of her back and arms.

"What are you doing?" the fond mother inquired. "Do you think this is a gymnasium? You don't come to an art gallery to swing on a railing. You come to look at the pictures. Stand up there, if you want to come again."
