BEN SELLING FOR UNITED STATES SENATOR

That Oregon should be represented in the United States senate by a man thoroughly identified with the state; a man familiar with the needs of every section of the commonwealth, and a man who stands for modern and progressive ideas in politics, there is not the least doubt.

Fortunately indeed for Oregon Ben Selling of Portland has, after mature deliberation, decided to let his name be used in connection with the senatorship. After being repeatedly urged by friends to enter the race Mr. Selling was not content to do so until he had more fully consulted the people, in whom he has ever had explicit faith. He accordingly wrote letters to a number of voters in the different sections asking what they would advise in the matter, and he received in reply over 14,000 personal requests pledging him loyal support and asking that he by all means enter the contest. It was not until these letters reached his desk that Mr. Selling decided to run. He has taken the people into his confidence, not after nomination, not at a time when election is near, but before the primaries. No committee brought out Ben Selling, no organization promoted his candidacy. It was a straight appeal to the people and that appeal met with a tremendous request for him to enter.

Many will no doubt like to know something of the career of this man who would be senator. He was born in California in 1852, ten years later removing to Oregon with his parents. As a boy he attended the Portland Academy where he received his education. While very young he started his business career as a clerk, working as most clerks did in those days, early and late, to obtain his start in life. How well he succeeded is best told by a business career which has been marked by such dealing throughout as to cause the general expression toward him, "Ben Selling is on the square and he is a good citizen," which can be heard on every side in Portland at the present time.

Selling as a Progressive.

It can truthfully be said that Ben Selling is one of the original progressives in Oregon politics. As far back as 1894 this man was fighting for the people and against ring rule. During the nauseating "hold-up" legislature which sent the name of Oregon around the world as a stench to the nostrils of good citizenship, this man was working to enact laws giving more power to the people and to de throne the corrupt machine. He was responsible for the passage of a bill in 1898 which eliminated the gigantic steal caused by a fee system in the office of district attorney and placing that office on a flat salary. He is found later fighting successfully for the passage of an eight hour law, the child labor law and many, many more measures which have proved a Godsend to the people of Oregon, and which have helped remove this state from a condition that was worse than Tammany ever dared inflict on New York—bringing it to the foreground of progressive government.

Applying strict business principles to his every act as a public official, always advocating economy in public expenditures, Mr. Selling today stands before the people of Oregon on a platform that carries assurance of honest effort for many federal measures needed by this state, and measures that can be obtained from the national congress if a man is elected who will work earnestly and consistently for them as Ben Selling has worked for the passage of the people's laws in the state legislature.

Among the issues pledged in his platform are tariff reform with justice to producer and consumer, development of Oregon's rivers and harbors, federal land court to expedite the claims of settlers, parcels post, Alaska development, free use of the forest reserves by actual settlers, federal control of corporations, a monetary system free from the influence of Wall street, presidential primaries, direct election of president, vice president and United States senators, thus placing the government wholly and entirely, from the national capitol to the city hall, in the hands of the people.

Throws New Light on Fruit Packers.

G. Harold Powell is teaching the world how to save millions of dollars in packing and shipping fruit. "Fruit is a living organization with an allotted span of existence. Harsh handling shortens its life and renders it valueless for food." An extract from an article in the February American follows:

Two general conclusions have been reached by Mr. Powell and his band of plant specialists with regard to the keeping qualities of fruit in storage and in transportation: first that rough mechanical handling increases greatly the liability of all fruit to disease; and, second, that cooling, as quickly as possible after picking prolongs the life of fruit by retarding the ripening process, which in warm weather goes on more rapidly than on the tree. Simple! In one state, California, the losses from decay on oranges alone sometimes ran as high as $1,500,000 in a single year, and by pre-cooling this loss has been practically eliminated. Another general result of the investigation is that fruit may be enhanced in flavor by longer hanging on the tree, and still be shipped over much greater geographical area than formerly. "Mr. Powell has punctured many popular fallacious theories—among them, that apples and some other fruits keep better and are less liable to disease when picked green; and that fruit removed from storage decays more quickly than fruit that has been unstored but is equally ripe and is held in the same temperature as the first after storage. In these matters the whole world was from Missouri, and has required to be shown by a series of the most elaborately careful experiments. Then also, in peach-growing regions, in the land where the
