THE FIFTH COMMANDMENT

In his series of sermons on "The Ten Commandments," Mr. Hargreaves, last Sunday, argued that the fifth—"Honor thy father and thy mother," is more a subject for practical consideration of parents than for children.

"It is a great misfortune for a child when he cannot, or for any reason does not, honor, respect and obey his or her parents. The undeveloped life, like the ship in an untried sea, needs the control of one who knows, who cares, and who is able to direct.

"Commands are authoritative, not on account of the penalty which backs them, nor yet because of the severity of the tone which utters them; but on account of the virility of the commander. There may be formal submission to the regulation with penalty attached, but not real subjectivity.

"If parents would be obeyed, if they would be honored, let them bring their own bodies under such subjection as will produce a normal vitality with its accompaniment of unconscious authority. There is a force, a sort of psychic power, goes from the person of the self-restrained, virile man or woman which makes conformity to their wishes easy and natural.

"The inauguration of Governor Woodrow Wilson as President of the United States will be different from any other presidential inauguration that ever was held. Certain forms and customs grow up around such functions, and in course of time they come to be looked on almost as if they were written into the constitution instead of having no color of law at all. It is a truth that many times our unwritten laws are more vigorously enforced than those which have the authority, power and prestige of courts and the entire government behind them.

"The fact that children, in order to their own well-being, need to honor and obey those in authority, makes it incumbent on parents and other leaders that they do their part to make such obedience not only possible, but also easy and natural, and theirs is the large part. Children have not learned to force themselves to do the difficult thing. Conformity is easy just in ratio to the strength of character of the one whose desires are to be conformed to, and with that one lieth the responsibility for the needed submission. A roll is often necessary for the enforcement of discipline, but in its use a mistake is frequently made in the subject chosen for its infliction. If parents would buffet their own bodies more, children would need less whippings and scoldings, and the Fifth Commandment could be kept."

WOSIER MAN RAISES APPLES 'DE LUX

(Los Angeles Tribune.)

Edward L. Howe, packer of the finest apples in the world, is passing a few days at the Van Nuys. His Lehowa fruit farm products at Mosier, Ore., sell in the dining rooms of Los Angeles at 25 cents an apple and in Paris at the leading hotels, this same variety brings $1 per. This price holds good in Berlin, Vienna, London and other large cities to which Howe ships his fruit.

"My apples are not touched by the hand of man until they reach the consumer," said Howe, in describing his method of putting the apples on the market. "I call them a 'de luxe' apple, although they are different varieties—Spitzenbergs, Rome Beauties, Winesaps and others. The man who picks them wears gloves. Each apple is thoroughly cleaned with a cloth, given a fine polish and put in a tissue wrapper which bears the name of the variety and that of the packer. The handlers of the fruit through this process wear gloves. Then the apple is placed in an individual carton. In this it is packed in shipping boxes and served in the hotels of the world where only the best viands are to be found."

Howe has been packing his fruit in this manner for about five years and has been increasing the size of his ranch until he has about 200 acres devoted to the raising and marketing only the best of fruit. "Anything with a blemish is thrown into the discard," he said, and that accounts for the reason that he has secured a high price for fruit when apples produced all around his territory were bringing only 50 cents a box.

PREPARING FOR INAUGURATION

The inauguration of Governor Woodrow Wilson as President of the United States will be different from any other presidential inauguration that ever was held. Certain forms and customs grow up around such functions, and in course of time they come to be looked on almost as if they were written into the constitution instead of having no color of law at all. It is a truth that many times our unwritten laws are more vigorously enforced than those which have the authority, power and prestige of courts and the entire government behind them.

The inaugural ceremonies, or at least that portion of them which appeals to the public love of pomp and display, have no greater authority than custom to support them. The procession, the inaugural ball, the reception—all of these are the creation of the citizens' committee, and the Chief Executive with all the rest of the government, has been in the habit of gracefully acquiescing in them so that the public might have a holiday and enjoy a spectacle. But while it has been a profitable thing for the commercial interests in Washington and for the transportation interests to have a great assemblage of people, Congress has been in the habit of complacently footing a large part of the cost. This year there will be less to pay from the public purse, for the incoming President has refused to sanction the inaugural ball or an elaborate reception, so the chief spectacular feature of the inauguration will be the military parade; and this will satisfy the largest number of people and please their love of pomp and display.

For the first time the workers for woman suffrage will occupy a big place in the proceedings. They are making very extensive preparations and promise to do something spectacular, albeit it will undoubtedly be in perfectly good taste. So fast has the cause of "Equal Rights" progressed in the last few years that it is hardly necessary any more to argue further for universal suffrage.

Poultry Lecture

Professor James Dryden, of the Oregon Agricultural College, will give a "hen talk" at The Bales this afternoon. Invitations have been sent to many Mosier people to attend this interesting lecture and it is hoped that they will take advantage of the opportunity. Those who cannot, however, will have a chance to hear the same lecture tomorrow afternoon in Hood River. We understand that a large delegation will go from here, providing the through train which passes here at 10:20 a. m. will stop. Our local agent wired for instructions, but had received no reply at a late hour last night. However, as this is the regular passing point for this train and the east bound local, it would be well for those wishing to go to be in readiness at the station at train-time.

Give Them Now

Closed eyes, can't see the white roses; Cold hands, can't hold them, you know; Breath that is still cannot gather The sweet odors that from them blow. Death, with a peace beyond dreaming, Its children of earth doth endow. Life is the time to help them, So give them the flowers now.

Here are the struggles and striving, Here are the cares and the tears; Now, now is the time to be smoothing The frowns, the furrows and tears. What, to deaf ears, are kind sayings; What, to stilled hearts, the deep vow? Naught 'ere avail, after parting— Give them the flowers now. Just a kind word or a greeting, Just a warm hand-clasp or smile, They are the flowers that will lighten The burden for many a while. After the journey is over, What is the use of them—how Can they carry them, who must be carried? Oh! give them the flowers now. Blooms from the happy heart's garden, Plucked in the spirit of love; Blooms that are earthly reflections Of flowers that bloom above. Words cannot tell what a measure Of blessing such gifts will allow To dwell in the lives of many, So give them the flowers now. M. L. H.

What pleasant memories are associated with the word grill!

Memories of the cosy grill-room, the savory viands and the happy tete-a-tetes, or rollicking parties.

Grill is the magic word in cookery, and— The G-E Radiant Electric Grill is the magic device in electric cooking. Here in a single handy little device you have a toaster, broiler, stew pan, water heater, frying pan and griddle for baking pan cakes.

Like all electric cooking devices it is ready for use in an instant, and two or more kinds of cooking such as broiling and frying, or toasting and stewing etc., can be done at the same time. Right on the dining room table too, or in the sitting room, nursery or sick room if necessary.
