Church of Christ Notes

Our theme for next Lordsday morning will be the second sermon on "The Way to the Crown," and the evening sermon will be on this subject: "The Power of the Cross." The Loyal Berean Basket Supper, which is announced for one week from next Wednesday evening, cannot be held on that evening for good reasons, and the date will be announced later. Everyone will take notice.

What do church names mean? They mean something and stand for something. Reader, investigate concerning your church name, and see if it means what it should. Don't say there is nothing in a name. If there is nothing in mine, I am going to get rid of it.

H. CAMPBELL CLARK, Minister.

THE CHAFING DISH.

Antiquity of This Now Popular Cooking Utensil.

The chafing dish is not a utensil of modern invention. Looking backward over history's pages, many allusions are made to its use. Among the ruins of Pompeii have been found bronze chafing dishes of unique designs, and Mommansen, in his "Römische Geschichte," asserts that in those days a well wrought cooking machine came to cost more than an estate. Louis XV took much delight in cooking and, according to Guoncourt, often amused himself by making "quintessential stews in silver pans." The palate of Louis XIV was often tickled by "piping hot dishes brought in on a chafing dish."

Napoleon Bonaparte, when enjoying down the affairs of war and tending home life for a short period, cooked in a silver chafing dish an omelet for the enjoyment of the empress and himself. Mme. Renner, the beautiful and intellectual society leader, used the chafing dish, while Mme. de Stael, the greatest woman in literary history, when exiled from her beloved France took with her the chafing dish. We of today are doing much to keep alive the true spirit of hospitality by bringing the chafing dish into popular use.—Woman's Home Companion.

PETRIFIED BODIES.

Their Organic Materials Are Replaced by Mineral Particles.

In answer to the query, "Do biologists or chemists know the process of petrification or the reason why a human body or a plant in some cases takes the course of petrification instead of decaying?" we would say:

The process is at first one of decay slowly and replacement particle by particle of the organic material by inorganic or mineral. Water holding siliceous minerals in saturated solution is necessary, the flesh or plant disorganizes, the carbon, oxygen, nitrogen, hydrogen compounds disintegrate and escape, and the mineral particles, in the shape or form of the decaying body remaining intact. Now, the carbon in the bodies does not change to siliceous minerals. It disappears in its combination with the other elements. No element changes into another; this would be mutation. Replacement is the word used here. Thus analyze a petrified man or plant—no organic matter can be found—only inorganic, and this weighs far more than did the animated body. The entire process of petrification is a mysterious work of nature.—New York American.

Authors and Novel Reading.

The objection professed by many women novelists against reading fiction may be based on the same grounds as those raised by the little boy at the tea party who refused to eat jam "cos father makes it." Some distinguished writers in other fields have been voracious novel readers. Concerning the author of the standard work on the British constitution Grant Duff relates: "Bagehot, like Sir Henry Maine, Sir James Stephen and Sir George Venables, had a perfect passion for novels and would read and reread them with the greatest delight. He had been reading 'Rob Roy' half an hour before his death." Tennyson, too, according to William Allingham, was "a constant novel reader. 'What I dislike,' he once said, 'is beginning a new novel. I should like to have a novel to read to a million volumes, to last me my life.'"—London Standard.

The Dead Watch Ticked.

A strong box containing family records and heirlooms was opened a few days ago to examine an old manuscript. The box had not been disturbed for several years, and the women who had taken it into a private room were surprised when they removed an old fashioned open face watch from its resting place to hear it tick loudly. This to them was evidence that the box had been tampered with. But every thing was found intact and in keeping with the memorandum of contents, and they were much perplexed because of the ticking watch, which ceased its activity before the box was returned to its place. A watchmaker who was consulted said that such "momentary life" in "dead" timepieces when disturbed was not unusual.—New York Tribune.

Mosier Book Store

A. B. Schoonover went to The Dalles yesterday to enter complaint against Wm. Chaffin, the charge being assault with a deadly weapon. It appears that Schoonover and Chaffin got into a mix-up on the street Tuesday night and Chaffin used a knife, cutting Schoonover in the arm. Dr. Robinson dressed the wound and the injured man was able to appear against Chaffin at the county seat.

NOTICE

To the Fruit Growers of Wasco County: Owing to the lateness of this Spring and bad roads, I will not be able to visit each locality in this county in time to spray with winter spray lime and sulphur, so will give notice through the papers. I want every person in Wasco County, Oregon, having fruit trees or shrubbery infested with scale or other insects that damage fruit trees or fruit, to spray and spray thoroughly. Test your spray and see if it is the proper strength, then you will have no trouble if you do your work thoroughly. We all know what the law is on spraying. Let everyone obey the law and spray thoroughly this spring and rid our county of insect pests.

J. P. CARROLL, Deputy Fruit Inspector for Wasco County, Oregon.
