GLEAM OF THE EMERALD.

Its Brilliant Green Light Has No Rival on Land or Sea.

"Interesting," said a gem expert, "is the word that most persons apply to an emerald. There is only one other jewel which shares this quality, and that is the opal, which at its best has also green tints, although of course they are entirely different from those of an emerald. The reason that makes an emerald interesting apart from its beauty and value is the same that makes the woman with green eyes the most interesting of her sex. It's a light that never was on land or sea; it's a brilliant gleam that gives the accent to any sort of costume and any sort of complexion. It isn't like a soft green or a so called artistic green. The emerald is the soul of life, light and beauty."

The emerald has the advantage of being one of the most becoming of gems. Light haired beauties claim it for their own, for they declare that nothing else, not even the sapphire, accentuates their delicate fairness so effectively. Brunettes are adorable in emeralds, especially the brunettes with brilliant coloring. Strangely enough, blue eyes, instead of being dimmed by the jewel, rather fire and depth from its close neighborhood. They take on a delectable green blue gleam and seem much larger than when the emeralds are not near. As for the auburn haired beauty, it is her stone par excellence.

The Servant Problem.

There was but one cook in the intelligence (why do they call it that?) office, and two housewives were bidding for her services, with fire in their eyes. "Come and cook for me," said one, "and you won't have to work on Thursdays and Sundays." "Cook for me," said the other, "and you won't have to make your own bed." "With me you can entertain your friends in the parlor." "I always give my servants my best clothes and wear the old ones." "You don't have to wash and wipe the dishes if you take the situation with me." The first housewife was desperate. "Come with me," she exclaimed, "and you won't have to cook."—Kansas City Star.

Took Tim at His Word.

"That clear of yours," said the passenger with the chin beard, smiling genially, "has burned about half its length down one side." "So?" frowned the man with the curled mustache, turning his head sideward and looking at him from head to foot. "Well, that is the way I like my cigars, sir." "So when a spark from his cigar fell on the skirt of his new sixty dollar overcoat and proceeded to burn a hole in it the man with the chin beard reflected, "Perhaps that's the way he likes his overcoats," and said nothing.—Chicago Tribune.

A Distinction.

"How do you pronounce the word pa-pa," Miss Jibley, asked Hieken looper—"pup-paw or popper? I am writing an article on 'How American Girls Speak.'" "Why, I say pup-paw, of course," replied Miss Jibley. "I want to distinguish my father from my fiance, who is my popper."—Harper's Weekly.

A Genius.

"So you insist that your boy Josh is a genius?" "Yes," replied Farmer Cornbloss. "I don't know exactly what a genius is. But we've got to give some excuse for his not doing any regular work."—Washington Star.

Not Refined Enough.

Doctor—You need some iron in your system. Patient—That's so plentiful! Can't you prescribe some of the more precious metals?—Exchange.

Shoeing Horses.

The art of shoeing horses to protect their hoofs against the evils of hard usage was unknown to the Greeks and Romans and is first mentioned in the history of the Celts as late as the fifth century.

There is not any virtue the exercise of which even momentarily will not impress a new firmness upon the features.—Ruskin.
