APPLE MARKET QUIET

Portland, Ore., Nov. 5, 1913.—The market for Pacific Northwest apples at Eastern and Central Western points, while somewhat more active, is still not brisk enough to fully absorb the very liberal offerings from this section.

In general there has been practically no change in value. For Extra Fancy Cashmere Spitzbergs local interests are still strong in their views at $1.80 and $1.90 a box, f. o. b., and no sales are being made below this range.

A message from Kansas City states that at the present time there are 75 carloads of Pacific Northwest apples held in storage there, together with perhaps 50 carloads from Utah and Colorado. The market is quoted more active and as soon as the latter stock is out of the way the general situation is expected to improve.

Cables from Glasgow indicate that buyers there who purchased Yellow Newtowns here earlier in the season at $1.90 for Extra Fancy are losing money in their speculation because the market at present abroad does not justify such an extreme buying price.

It is generally presumed that this condition is due to the fact that Oregon Newtowns have been arriving there with practically no color and better colored stock has been available from California.

AFTER SIXTY YEARS.

There are people in this world, possibly in this town, who will tell you that no man has ever yet accumulated a fortune honestly. Hew refreshing it is, therefore, to note what an exchange says about a well known resident, now deceased, of our sister state across the river, who proves a prominent exception to the supposed rule. And beyond a doubt there are many other wealthy men who acquired their riches in the same way.

We quote the following from the exchange mentioned: "The richest man in the state of Washington has died at the age of 86 years. His name was Cyrus Walker and he earned all he had by thrift, energy and far-sightedness. It is a real distinction nowadays to have procured great wealth by honest industry and lawful grasp of lawful opportunity. But these are the things Mr Walker did. There was no taint of scandal about his methods. He took undue advantage of no man's needs. He corrupted no Legislatures nor City Councils. He kept out of politics. He obeyed the laws. He leaves a good name, which is worth more than vast riches to any man, living or dead.

Cyrus Walker was born in Maine. He came to the Pacific Coast in the '40s and in 1853 he went to Puget Sound, then surrounded by virgin forests. He soon engaged in the manufacture of lumber, using machinery of the most primitive kind. In time he built up a great industry. He bought timber land from the Government at prices ranging from $1.50 per acre. After a while the Puget Mill Company, of which he was the creator, owned tens of thousands of acres of fir and cedar forests. They were not grabbed nor stolen. They were bought at prices fixed by the Government or by private owners.

It is trite to say that there are now no such opportunities as Mr. Walker had. There are, though of a different kind. There always will be so long as a man is permitted to get and to keep what he fairly earns, either by work or by skill or by good fortune.

Walker was a pioneer. He went as a youth into a rough and remote country. He saw only dimly its wonderful future. He suffered many personal hardships. He took great chances.

He stayed by his job for sixty years. He founded a great and worthy business. He prospered as the country prospered and as the lumber industry expanded. He built for the future. He lived and strove in the present. He died in the full knowledge that he had done his best. Let the young fellow who thinks there are no longer any openings for him such as young Walker found sixty years ago look over the wide world, as he did.

Max A. Vogt, the popular and efficient cashier of the First National Bank of The Dalles for the past twelve years, has been elevated to the position of president of the bank, to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of President John S. Schenck. Mr. Vogt's experience in the banking business well fits him for his new position.

TUESDAY'S ELECTION

The election in Mosier last Tuesday was a very quiet affair, only 70 votes being polled. All the measures voted on carried in this precinct by good majorities except the Sterilization Bill, which carried by one vote.

All the measures carried in the state but the Sterilization Bill.

The greatest interest to residents of Wasco and Hood River counties was the fight on the "wet or dry" question in the former, and the recall of the county judge and commissioners in the latter county. Hood River turned down its present officers, electing E. E. Stanton as county judge, and Edward Hawks and J. O. Hannum as commissioners.

The fight in The Dalles was hard fought and bitter, the prohibition element losing out by only 74 votes—close enough to throw a scare into the opposition.

SHIPPERS TO BENEFIT BY IMPROVED SERVICE

Effective October 27th, 1913, through freight service was inaugurated by the Union Pacific from Kansas City over the new line from Marysville, Hastings and Gibbon, serving all territory west of Cheyenne. This means a great deal to patrons of the O-W. R. & N., as it materially shortens the distance from Kansas City to the West.

A day's difference in receipt of merchandise and 24 hours less time required for delivery of products eastbound will appeal to the dealer and the shipper. Close connection with the U. P. at Granger, and close connection with Oregon Short Line at Huntington, will enable the O-W. R. & N. to offer a superior service throughout its territory.

All traffic moving through Kansas City will be expedited, and the shippers of the Northwest are brought closer to the people with whom they do business. The announcement is received with a great deal of satisfaction by the business men.

Ortley Items

The Ladies' Aid netted $11.75 from their Halloween Social.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. McCully, of Hood River, were guests of Fred Tooley Sunday.

Some witches invaded W. W. Field's barn on Halloween and—well, ask Clayton Feld about it.

Among the visitors at the Ortley Inn Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Moe, of Hood River, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. McGregor, of Mosier, B. Kinser and Geo. C. Engelke, of Portland.

Digging spuds is the principal occupation at Ortley at present. The Hood River Orchard Land Co. have about 45 Indians, besides one potato digger, at work, who are turning out from 600 to 800 sacks per day.

Mosierites who are in the habit of getting their daily supply of bread from the stores, were considerably annoyed last Monday when they couldn't get a loaf of bread in town, unless they were fortunate enough to have neighbors who could loan them some. This condition was caused by the delayed local passenger from Portland, due to a freight wreck at Wyeth, and which didn't arrive until after 12 o'clock.

No Bugaboos Down Cellar

Children can save you many tedious steps; but the tired mother hates to send a child into a dark cellar, and children dislike to go there.

No cellar need be dark now-a-days, to terrify children and worry older people. A ray of sunshine from an conveniently located in the cellar-way will brighten the darkest cellar at the mere touch of a switch.

The new low-voltage Edison Mazda Lamps are the most economical lamps for cellar-ways, halls, closets and other parts of the house which need light only intermittently for brief periods at a time. Try a few and realize their convenience.
