VOL. V

MOSIER, WASCO COUNTY, OREGON, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1913

NO. 41

LAND CONCERN SAFE

That the Hood River Orchard Land Company has not been refused permission to do business is the statement of officers of the company, who are in possession of correspondence from the Corporation Commissioner showing that altho they had not asked permission to sell stocks or bonds, they had been refused permission to do that by the Commissioner, says the Oregonian.

Referring to the published reports which were made as the result of an examination of the holdings of the company, located at Ortley, Ore., about seven miles west of The Dalles, by S. B. Vincent, examiner for the Corporation Commissioner, J. H. Devlin, of the company, said that he was at a loss to understand why such an investigation and report was made unless it was at the instigation of T. H. Field, a purchaser of one of the company's tracts.

The latter instituted proceedings some time ago for having his contract canceled on the ground of false representations. Mr. Devlin draws this inference from the fact that Mr. Vincent called upon Mr. Field soon after arriving at Ortley and spent the following day with him and his relatives and friends going over some of the company's property, including the Field tract.

"It will be noted," said Mr. Devlin, "that the greater part of this report is not based upon Mr. Vincent's personal investigation, but upon the allegations made to him by third parties, who were evidently instrumental in getting him up there and who took him over the tract and made statements that were naturally prejudicial to the company."

"Most of the representations made to Mr. Field at the time he bought the tract were made by his father, who was then acting as agent of the company and who had been over the company's holdings and was at that time and ever since has been a resident at Ortley, and an owner of one of the company's orchard tracts. Mr. Field and his father had cultivated the tract in question for nearly two years, raising potatoes between the rows of trees, and not until the expiration of this time and just before a substantial payment was due on his contract, did Field make complaint, other than that there were a few grubs in the ground. I consider, however, this suit of minor importance and do not fear the outcome, but I want to set the reading public right with reference to the examiner's report."

"Some of the news articles stated that the company had been refused a permit to do business, which is entirely erroneous. The Commissioner did, however, write the company a letter stating that in view of the showing and the recommendations of the examiner's report he could not grant a permit to us for the sale of stock, bonds or other securities of the company and this may also lead to the inference that the company had made application for such a permit, which our records, as well as that of the department, will show is not the case."

"So far as the property of the company is concerned, I will state that we have had a number of the leading horticulturalists of the state investigate it and many prominent people have invested in this property after making a thorough and searching investigation, both of the soil and of the company's methods in caring for the orchards, and we have received complimentary reports from all of them, and, while we do not feel at liberty to give a list of these names, we will be glad to refer anyone interested in the affairs of the company to them.

"As is stated in the examiner's report, there is some land on this large tract of over 2000 acres that is waste. That condition exists in practically all large tracts in any fruit district of the state. These portions of the tract, however, are not being sold as orchard land.

"We feel that a published report to the effect that we had been refused a permit to sell stock is an injustice to the company, as it has never requested such permit. However, the department has not undertaken to interfere with the company's conducting its business affairs as it has been doing in the past."

WOODMEN HOUSERAISING

Claire Bailey is building a nice little bungalow on the east side of town. His brother Woodmen got together last Tuesday and "put up a job" on him. That is, they assembled at the scene of action, sixteen strong, and made merry and light work, under the supervision of Billy Marsh, and raised the building and put the shingles on by night, much to the gratification and appreciation of said Claire. The Woodmen are noted for tricks like this and perpetrate them every once in awhile.
