THE YULETIDE SEASON

Christmas has come and gone for another year, tho the Christmas spirit is still in the air. We refer to the spirit which brings the joy of giving to our loved ones and friends; friends whom we feel assured will return the gifts, often with interest. All this is very pleasant, drawing families closer together and ce-menting friendships. But the true spirit of Christmas time is the spirit which prompts giving to the deserving poor and needy.
Those who by stress of circumstances are in dire need of the bare necessities of life; those who cannot give an extra crust of bread to their hungry little ones, to say nothing of a cheap toy or a rag doll. And the pity of it is that there are tens of thousands in the land so circumstanced; many of them too proud to beg or to make known their dire need.

A number of cases of poverty and want were discovered in Portland and made public thru the Portland papers. The list of cash donations to a relief fund was published, and it was evident that many of the smaller subscriptions came from poor people who know how to sympathize with the still poorer, and who gave their mite. As a result, many cases of actual suffering and want were relieved at this Christmas time; many a too frequently empty stomach got a square meal, and the givers as well as the receivers felt better for it.

Yes, Christmas is gone, but not the needs of the needy, and the poor are ever with us. Not particularly here, but everywhere. The practice of giving presents on New Years day and wishing a happy and prosperous year, has long been a custom.
So also has the habit of giving to those less fortunate-cheering their desolate lives, not only with words, but deeds. The Christmas opportunity is behind us; but the New Year opportunity is still ahead of us to take advantage of, if we care to.

IN CORRECTION

Our attention has been called to a regrettable error that appeared in the Bulletin of last week in the report of the Ross divorce proceeding.

We find the facts to be just opposite to the report as we published it. In other words, we find that Dr. Ross was the plaintiff and that the decree and custody of the daughter were granted him upon his petition.

We deeply regret the error and gladly take this opportunity to correct it in so far as we may.

Upon second thought we realize that we erred in making mention of the matter at all since it is purely private in character and not a proper subject for newspaper discussion.

While, as a matter of fact, we did not discuss the subject-merely stated what was reported in the Portland Journal, it were better not to have mentioned the occurrence at all. The offerings and goings, the downittings and the uprisings of people prominent or otherwise are considered legitimate news by newspapers, with no exceptions, as is proven every day by any paper one may chance to pick up.
This is a lamentable fact, even if the reports were always absolutely true. It is also a fact, which is being widely recognized, that there are many things, to repeat our statement, that are considered legitimate news because they are made public thru the courts, as in the case in question, but which do not or should not concern the public.

We hope all our readers and everybody else had a jovous Christmas, and that Prosperity and Happiness may attend them through the New Year, and all the years to come.
