MOSIER AGAIN LEADS.

The Northwestern Fruit Exchange, a selling agency of Portland who have handled the fruit from the Mosier district for the past two seasons, have compiled and published in a booklet entitled "Results," the prices secured by them for the fruit from the eight districts connected with them for the past season. The general average per box for all grades and all sizes, as well as the percentage of four tier and larger of the first two grades for the different districts is as follows.

District	General Average	Percentage of 125 & larger
Mosier	$1.50	76 "
Hood River	1.46	60 "
Rogue River	1.45	62 "
Wenatchee	1.40	57 "
Cashmere	1.39	79 "
Peshastin	1.39	66 "
Yakima	1.32	62 "
Weiser	1.19	37 "

These figures are net to the local Association, after every charge, including the exchange selling charge, has been deducted.

It is very gratifying to Mosier people to know that out of every 1000 cars handled by the Exchange this season we received the highest average price, and was exceeded in desirable sizes by only one district.

The figures prove conclusively the value of the Exchange to this district, as well as the standing of the quality of Mosier fruit in the markets of the world. Copies of the booklet can be secured from the local Association.

DYNAMITING FOR PLANTING

[Stark Orchard and Spray Book.]

OBJECT OF DYNAMITING

In dynamiting, the object should be to get the maximum pulverizing effect without blowing out a big hole. After the explosion a low, cone-shaped mound should remain where the tree is to be planted. Do not try to blow out a large hole—this is a waste of dynamite and will not give as good results as when the ground is merely lifted up and drops back in a cone-shaped mound. Soil should be allowed to settle for several weeks at least and it is better if it can remain over winter before planting.

DIRECTIONS

Dynamite is not as dangerous as the average person imagines. However, caution is advisable at all times. Note the list of don'ts, page 16.

PREPARING THE CHARGE

With an earth auger or an iron bar begin your hole, which does not necessarily have to be more than two inches in diameter, and as deep as necessary, depending upon the work to be done. An average depth is 1 1/2 to 3 feet. The bottom of the hole should reach within a few inches of the hardpan or dense subsoil, if there is one. When the hole has reached the desired depth, prepare the lead or cartridge as follows:

Break a stick in half, which is usually enough (first cutting the paper with a sharp knife), and cut a piece of fuse about 4 in. longer than the hole is deep. Insert one end of the fuse in the cap and crimp it with the pliers or crimper provided for the purpose, near the open end (Don't crimp near the head). With a narrow, pointed instrument, usually one prong of the pliers or crimper, push a hole diagonally into the side of the dynamite stick or directly in at the end making same about two inches deep. Within this push the dynamite cap to which the fuse is attached. With a string tie the stick and fuse and stick so that it will not slip out when lowered into the hole, and the cartridge is complete. Lower the charge into the hole and force firmly with a wooden stick (not metal), and if it does not reach the bottom, gently press as far as possible. Several handfuls of dirt should then be thrown in and this tamped with a wooden stick, then more dirt and more tamping until the hole is filled to the ground level. The wooden stick or pole used in tamping should be long, so that the man tamping can stand to one side—not directly over the hole.

After removing all explosives, dynamite sticks, dynamite caps, implements, etc., to a reasonable distance, see that all persons are out of the way and then, with a pocket knife, split the end of the fuse and light with a match; a few seconds will elapse, which will give ample time to retreat to a safe distance.

IMPORTANT.

The actual work with dynamite is simple but the persons handling dynamite should not become careless. The following Don'ts, if heeded, will prevent 90 per cent of the accidents:

Don't expose dynamite to the rain or allow it to get water soaked, as it weakens it.

Don't leave the caps or dynamite near the place where you are firing a charge.

Don't carry caps loosely in a pocket, or in a large box where they will shake—The caps are very sensitive.

Don't crimp the cap with your teeth—a special crimper can be procured from the Dynamite company.

Don't tamp the charge with a steel or iron implement, use a wooden pole.

Don't cut a stick of dynamite; merely cut through the outside paper with a sharp knife and break the stick.

Don't handle old dynamite carelessly, it explodes more easily than new dynamite.

Don't attempt to dynamite in wet soils, it has a bad effect on the ground and will give unsatisfactory results.

Don't expect a charge to go off immediately after lighting, always wait a reasonable length of time.

Don't rush; steadiness and coolness is best.

Don't forget to make the other fellow be careful.

Don't smoke when working around dynamite and caps.

FROZEN DYNAMITE.

Most dynamites, excepting low freezing dynamite, will freeze at about 45 degrees Fahrenheit. Low freezing dynamite will seldom freeze at the freezing point of water, and often will not freeze at much lower temperatures if not exposed too long. Frozen dynamite can be thawed by placing the box in a pile of manure, where it will soften in a few hours. If no manure is available, it should be thawed in the following manner: Secure a double boiler (one kettle within another). The larger or outside kettle, fill with warm water. Place the dynamite within the inner or smaller kettle. Do not allow the water to become warmer than the hand can stand. Do not put on the stove to heat, but pour in hot water.

OTHER USES OF DYNAMITE

Dynamite is used to good advantage in vineyards by placing a series of small charges between the rows, varying from one to three feet in depth. This is a system of light subsoling and will cause a more vigorous growth and a heavier yield. Also dynamite is used with excellent results on old trees which have begun to bear smaller, less valuable crops. Explosions of several light charges at interval around the tree—about seven to fifteen feet from the trunk—will loosen up the roots and give the tree more vigor. About four charges equally distributed about each tree is generally sufficient. Charges should be placed one to three feet deep using a half stick of 20 per cent dynamite. Do not explode the charge under the tree.

COST OF DYNAMITING

The Du Pont Powder company gives the following estimate on tree planting with dynamite, using Red Cross Extra 20 per cent strength: "If dynamiting and blasting supplies are purchased at the agricultural schedule, the cost of explosives for planting a tree will average about 6 cents; that is for one-fourth pound dynamite approximately three and one-half cents for a cap 1 cent for fuse from 1 to 2 cents, depending upon the length of it. Purchased in quantity, the cost will be considerably less."
