MOSIER VOTES 7 1-2 MILLS SCHOOL TAX

The school meeting last Saturday afternoon, which was called for the purpose of voting a tax levy for the school, was not as well attended as it should have been. Through an oversight the janitor had made no fire and the room was exceedingly cold. This was the reason given by some of those present for leaving before the meeting was adjourned.

After the reading by the clerk of the school budget, which had been advertised, setting forth the various items for which money was to be appropriated, it was shown that a 7-mills tax would be necessary to meet the expenses of the next school year. This included a two-mill tax for the maintenance of the High School. The motion was therefore made that a 7-mill levy be voted. The motion was seconded and put to vote. The result of the ballot was: Yeas, 7, noes, 11, the motion being defeated by four votes. The measure was defeated because it was considered that the High School was an unnecessary burden on the people. J. K. McGregor cited the fact that they were paying the principal of the High School a big salary and getting inadequate results as far as attendance was concerned; that while there may be enough high school pupils to warrant the teaching of the higher branches, they did not take advantage of their opportunities, consequently Mr. McGregor was of the opinion that the High School should be abolished, thus saving two mills to the taxpayer. J. T. Davenport, when asked for his opinion, said he thought just as Mr. McGregor did. Most of the others who voted down the 7 mills levy, left before they had a chance to tell why they voted no, and before the meeting was adjourned.

E. A. Race and E. L. Root told why they voted for the 7-mills levy. The latter stated that he was probably one of the heaviest taxpayers in town—certainly heavier than some who voted against the levy, yet he was willing to pay the extra two mills in order to keep the High School. He figured that it would cost him (and naturally all who have children and who want them educated) less to pay that two mills for 20 years than it would to send one of his boys away to high school for one year and he thought those who had no children to educate should be willing, for the general welfare of the district, to pay the extra two mills.

Mr. Race expressed himself along the same lines as Mr. Root, and the arguments were sound and logical.

But the situation was not improved by logic, except to set the people to thinking. By voting down the 7-mills levy, the district was left with a cent to run the school another term. It is absolutely necessary to keep our school going. Furthermore, the school bonds will mature in 1916 and it is high time to prepare for liquidation. The 7-mills levy having been defeated, and anything less than that being inadequate to maintain the High School, one of the taxpayers patrons of the school moved to levy a 7 1/2 mills tax. The motion being seconded, it was put to vote and was carried, 6 to 1.

If there are any who feel aggrieved at the action taken at Saturday's meeting, it will be well to remember that they had the privilege of attending—or of staying until the meeting adjourned. The meeting and its purpose was advertised sufficiently so that none could plead ignorance. If more of the taxpayers and patrons of the school would take a greater interest in it and consider it a duty to attend the meetings and vote on the questions as they come up, it would be a good thing. But they should not remain away and then complain if things are done that don't suit them.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION

Next Tuesday, Dec. 8th, the citizens of Mosier will elect an entire set of city officers, and from the slate that has been prepared, there will be a general change in the personnel.

The following candidates have filed their petitions with the City Recorder and their names will appear on the official ballot:

Mayor, for a term of two years.

E. A. Race.

E. L. Root.

Councilmen, to serve two years.

Jas. Cherry, W. E. Chown, W. A. Husbands, L. J. Merrill, G. R. Wood.

Councilmen to serve one year.

E. H. Burt, Jas. Camp, J. T. Davenport, D. W. Hudson, David Robinson.

City Recorder, P. L. Arthur.

City Treasurer, J. E. Cole.

Quite an assortment to choose from. Take your pick, but be sure and vote for the right men, especially for councilmen.

Who are the right men? That question will be asked many times between now and election day, and answered in as many ways as there are candidates.

The right man for any public office is he who has the public welfare at heart first, last and all the time; a broadminded man who is capable of looking at both sides of a question and deciding the question, so far as he is concerned, impartially and for the best interests of the majority; a man who can think for himself—who has convictions and the courage of them; who is not influenced by personal feelings or interests or swayed by another's smooth talk; a man who is progressive in his ideas, yet conservative enough to be governed in his actions by a proper sense of proportion. In fact, a man to make a good councilman should possess good common sense and business ability and should use it in the transaction of the city's business, just as he would in his own.

Pick out these men from the list of candidates and vote for them—and you will get the "right" men.

But be sure and vote. Don't stay away from the polls and then kick because the "right" men were not elected. Consider it your duty as well as your privilege to vote.

"MUSTN'T TOUCH"

Remember when you were a little tad, or taddess, and your mother or father pointed out something to your little eyes and said "Mustn't touch?" Of course you remember it. You'll never forget as long as you live how those very words threw a cloak of mystery around the object that you "mustn't touch," and how that phrase started the determination in your mind that you would touch.

The other day a mother took her two-year-old baby to call on a neighbor. The first thing the child noticed in the room was the glare of the fire in a stove. She pointed at it and said, in her childish lisp, "Pity!"

"Mustn't touch, baby," warned her mother, drawing her away from the stove. Then the mother turned to talk with her friend. The very first thing the baby did was to touch the hot stove. The "mustn't touch" command of her mother only whetted her curiosity and made her touch the stove. But she burned her hand and learned thru experience not to touch.

The other day the mother of a boy in town made some pumpkin pies. As she placed them near a window to cool she saw her young son looking longingly at the steaming pies.

"Mustn't touch," she warned, shaking a finger at him. Then she left the room. The first thing her son did was to grab one of the pies and eat it all. He became very ill. He learned, thru experience, that he should not eat too much pie. The "mustn't touch" warning had only made him all the more curious.

Men and women are only big boys and girls. They have almost the same thoughts and identically the same aversion to the phrase "mustn't touch." Only in the realm of big boy and girlhood it isn't a mother or father who says "Mustn't touch," but some law, framed by a zealot who would try to make legislation do what nothing but education or experience will accomplish. Such laws are always broken and thus is generated a disrespect for good and necessary laws.

If a law was passed today prohibiting a man having ham and eggs for breakfast it would be a safe wager that he would have ham and eggs for breakfast for 364 days out of the year, and on the 365th day he would have—ham and eggs.

BOOSTS NORTHWEST APPLES

The O-W. R. & N. Company is undoubtedly doing much in its own way towards creating a market for the Northwest Apple. In a letter to the press of the state Mr. Wm. McMurray, General Passenger Agent of the company, says:

"The Pacific Northwest justly prides itself on the excellent quality of its apples. To be a profitable crop, however, there must be a market—a larger consumption of apples. As a means towards an end by stimulating the general use of apples, the O-W. R. & N. Co. has just issued a booklet of '150 Recipes for Apple Dishes.' The company has also employed Mrs. Elinor Meacham Redington as Traveling Lecturer and Demonstrator of Apple Cookery. Mrs. Redington is now making a tour over our lines in a special car, delivering lectures and giving demonstrations. At every point visited she has received the cooperation of the local commercial bodies and women's auxiliaries. Thousands of copies are being distributed and the movement is being received with popular enthusiasm."

To mere man, unless he is a culinary expert, the book will not mean much except something good to eat; but it will appeal to the housewife who likes to try new dishes. We have not been authorized to make any offers whatever, but presume to say that copies of this valuable book might be secured by application through this office.
